McKees Rocks Rioters Forced to Remain Indoors by Constabulary's Guns.

TON OF REVOLVERS TAKEN

Sheriff Insists That Two Attempts Were Made to Blow Up Car Plant with Bombs.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 23.—With the State Constabulary patrolling its streets in force, holding up and searching every pedestrian for arms, and dispersing crowds in their initial stage; with smoke arising from three of the smokestacks at the plant of the Pressed Steel Car Company, and with several families in mourning, the strikers of McKees Rocks to-night realize that they have virtually lost their fight.

The repressive measures of the Constabulary were the most spectacular incidents of a day of excitement following a night of bloodshed and terror. Smarting under the death of two of their number and the perhaps fatal injury to two others, the constables received orders to let no two men stand talking with each other and to keep all moving—and they did. Every person venturing on the streets was held up at the point of a gun by one trooper and searched for weapons. As almost every person in the vicinity of McKees Rocks has been heavily armed, the result was that almost a ton of revolvers was confiscated. The State troopers showed no mercy, nor did they play any favorites.

Dr. Robert Hanover, one of the most prominent physicians of McKees Rocks, was talking with a friend on the street this forenoon when he was ordered to move on. He hesitated a moment, and the next second he fell, knocked senseless by the trooper's mace, and was carried to a hospital, where he is in a serious condition. Complaint to those in charge of the Constabulary brought the reply that the trooper was only obeying orders and the State would stand back of him.

Strike Meeting Dispersed.

Effort to hold a meeting of strikers on the famed Indian Mound this morning was checked at the point of guns. Several troopers were sent up the hill when the strikers began to congregate. Some of the strikers protested, whereupon they were chased down the hill by the mounted troopers and six of them locked up. The strike leaders complain that the troopers threatened to "blow h—" out of them if they started a meeting, and while the troopers say they did not use such words they "surely intended to do that very thing" if the strikers had persisted in holding a meeting. The troopers remained on duty to-night and will be relieved at daybreak by another troop which is coming by special train from Scranton.

The City Council of McKees Rocks to-night at a special meeting called for the purpose appointed a committee to go to Harrisburg and ask Gov. Stuart to call the State Constabulary from the plant of the company. Neither the car company nor the strikers were criticised at the Council meeting, the purpose being simply to protect the citizens of McKees Rocks and Schoenville.

As a further precaution against disorder, and to prevent further loss of life, traffic on all the trolley car lines in the strike zone was suspended at 10 o'clock to-night. J. D. Callery, President of the Pittsburg Street Railways Company, announced that his company is and has been for some time unable to protect its passengers from the strikers. He cites as instances, the killing of Deputy Sheriff Harry Exler last night, while a passenger on a car, and the killing of three other passengers who were chased from a car before being killed. Mr. Callery, in suspending service on the Neville Island line and the Schoenville line, each of which pass through the strike zone, declared that the service will not be resumed until the trouble is over or Sheriff Gumbert sees fit to man each car with Deputy Sheriffs, armed with rifles.

State Trooper John C. Smith died this morning, and Mike Desoski, a striker, to-night, in a Pittsburg hospital from making the death total to date seven. Troopers O'Donnel and Jones, with four strikers, are so seriously injured that they are not expected to recover. The revised list of seriously injured in hospitals reaches seventeen to-night.

Three Others Killed, Perhaps.

There is a rumor that at least three others were killed in the fight of last night and that their bodies were thrown into the Ohio River by the strikers, and so persistent was the story to-day that the authorities had that part of the river surrounding the works of the car company dragged for bodies, but none was found. The story is that while the State troopers and the strikers were battling near the O'Donovan Bridge there was another battle between strikers and strikebreakers in another part of the town, when several men were killed and the bodies hidden.

The statement made in New York by Frank N. Hoffstot, President of the Pressed Steel Car Company, that there had been made no effort to blow up the plant brought vigorous denial and array of facts from the authorities here. Sheriff Gumbert insisted that there had been two distinct and separate attempts made to blow up the plant with bombs and one attempt to blow up the State troopers. Gumbert says he has several of the unexploded bombs to prove his assertion. Chief Deputy Sheriff Edward Swartwood, formerly a famous ball player, says an attempt was made this morning to blow up the plant, but that the fuse failed to work. Swartwood and some of his men recovered the bomb, which had been thrown into the mill yard, and it was dissected to-day. It was made of steel and clay and filled with high explosives. That the bomb was made in McKees Rock, within the shadow of the mill, was shown in the nature of the clay used in its construction. The clay

TROOPS OUT IN MISSISSIPPI.

Summoned When Shooting of Newman Renews an Old Feud.

MEADVILLE, Miss., Aug. 23.—An attempt was made last night to assassinate Ernest Newman, Deputy Clerk of the Chancery Court, who succeeded his father, Dr. E. H. Newman, who was killed in a sensational feud fight a few weeks ago. Armed men on horseback surrounded his home, and one of them fired at him through a window. He was shot in the arm.

The would-be assassins escaped, but bloodhounds are now on the trail.

NATCHEZ, Miss., Aug. 23.—Companies B and C of the Third Regiment of the State National Guard left here at 6:10 P. M. for Meadville. Sheriff Jones of Franklin County called for the troops in anticipation of serious trouble to-night arising from the attempted assassination of Ernest Newman last night.

Sheriff Jones notified Lieut. Gov. Manship, Acting Governor, late to-day that he did not believe he was able to cope with the situation in Meadville, as friends of both factions had been coming into the town from the country all day and were threatening to "tear the town up." It was upon his earnest solicitations that the troops were ordered out.

It is feared that friends of the Newmans and the Pritchards may clash before morning. When the father of Newman was killed a few weeks ago two or three other men were killed and the present Clerk was badly wounded.

Young Newman was recently elected to the office of Chancery Clerk over five opponents as his father's successor.

FIRES AT TAMMANY CAPTAIN.

Head of Bricklayers' Union Fails to Hit O'Shaughnessy—Street Shooting.

William J. Bowen, whose business card and a gold badge he wore represented him to be President of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, approached Michael O'Shaughnessy as he stood in front of the latter's saloon at 114 East Forty-first Street last night and attempted to empty the contents of his revolver into him. Three of the cartridges failed of fire and the other two bullets went wild.

Policeman Hughes arrested Bowen in the hallway of the Vanderbilt Hotel, in West Forty-second Street, where he lived, and locked him up in the East Fifty-first Street Station on the charge of felonious assault.

Mr. O'Shaugnessy, who is the Tammany Captain of the Twenty-seventh Assembly District, said that Bowen and a labor leader named McNulty, between whom there was bad blood, had been talking in his saloon yesterday afternoon, and that last night Bowen approached him, asked him if he hadn't been talking about him (Bowen) to McNulty, and then began firing.

ARRAIGNS BOSTON'S MAYOR.

Finance Commission Says He Placed Favored Persons on Payroll.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 23.—The first distinct arraignment of the executive and legislative branches of the municipal government of Boston during the present administration was made to-night in a report issued by the Finance Commission, which charged the office of Mayor George A. Hibbard with "extravagance," of "lessening executive vigilance," and the "placing of favored individuals upon the payrolls of the city."

Comparing the condition of the city's finances with other years the commission says:

> In the present year, owing to the disregard by the City Council of the financial condition of the city, the extravagance of certain department heads, and the failure of the Mayor to continue the work of reform, there has been on the whole a retrogression.

Commenting on the fact that Mayor Hibbard, in a message in January to the City Council emphasized the need of economy in all departments, the report adds:

> But the investigations of the commission have shown that this office during the present year has sought to procure positions for favored individuals in various departments. Such interference increases the expenses of the city and tends to demoralize the entire service.

As a remedy for the alleged evils the commission recommends:

> That all salaries needlessly raised be reduced; that all unnecessary appointments be revoked; that action on pending requests for increases in salary be postponed until superfluous employes be removed and excessive salaries be reduced to a proper basis; that executive departments be relieved of pressure from the Mayor's office in the appointment of subordinates.

JEROME ANNOUNCES HIS CANDIDACY

Says He Will Seek Renomination by Petition, as He Did in Last Election.

TAMMANY MAY SUPPORT HIM

Would Accept It, He Says—If He Should Do So the Republicans Might Make It an Issue.

District Attorney Jerome announced yesterday that he would enter the field as an independent candidate for re-election to the office he has held for eight years. Mr. Jerome will seek a renomination by petition, just as he did four years ago, when he was elected the second time.

The announcement, confirming plans his friends have known of for weeks, was made in this statement, given out late yesterday afternoon at the District Attorney's office:

> As the time approaches at which a District Attorney for the County of New York is to be elected, I have had to consider whether I should seek a re-election to that office.
>
> After having received for nearly eight years the honor and benefit of this office, it seems to me I should be guided in my determination, not by what may seem most to serve my personal interest, but by the consideration of whether a majority of the electors desire that I should further serve them in this position.
> I know of no way in which I can ascertain this except by offering myself as a candidate, and I have decided to seek again a nomination by petition, and to offer myself as a candidate for election to the office of District Attorney of New York County.

There was a report in circulation yesterday that Tammany Hall would indorse Mr. Jerome's candidacy. When it was rumored first early this Summer, that Mr. Jerome had in mind to seek a re-election, some friends of the District Attorney predicted that Tammany Hall would be compelled to take him up as its candidate. Persons close to Tammany Leader Murphy, however, at that time shook their heads, and said they were afraid Mr. Jerome wouldn't do as a Tammany candidate.

But within the last few days there has been a lot of Jerome talk among some leaders who are very influential in Tammany Hall. One prominent leader said yesterday that he wouldn't be at all surprised if Mr. Jerome should be the Tammany candidate for District Attorney this year. The fact that Mr. Jerome was determined to enter the field as an independent candidate, this leader said, wouldn't make any difference—if anything it would be helpful. As an independent candidate he would win for the Tammany ticket votes of independent Democrats, seldom cast nowadays for a straight Tammany candidate, and his name in the Tammany column on the official ballot would insure him the full Tammany vote.

"In my opinion," said this leader, "the Tammany ticket will be Justice Victor J. Dowling for Mayor and William Travers Jerome for District Attorney. Jerome admires Dowling and would say nice things about him on the stump, and Dowling is very fond of Jerome. Both are men to whom the most respectable element in the party couldn't possibly take exception. Jerome, besides, would bring a lot of independent and Republican votes to Tammany Hall."

Mr. Jerome's attention was called to the rumors that were in circulation. He smiled.

"Have you received any assurances of an indorsement from Tammany Hall?" he was asked.

"I have not sought nor have I received, directly or indirectly, any promise or assurance of an indorsement or support," he replied. "I do not suppose twenty people have known of my intention before the issuance of this statement. I have not endeavored to learn, directly or indirectly, what the attitude of Tammany Hall or any other political organization would be to my action. I have taken this course for the reasons stated in my statement and for no other reason. It seemed to me the right course to pursue, and I have pursued it, and I have not the slightest idea whether I shall have to fight alone or shall receive the indorsement of any political organization."

"Would you accept an indorsement from Tammany Hall and become its candidate for District Attorney, if such an indorsement were offered to you?" Mr. Jerome was aked.

"My attitude on that question is precisely what it was in 1905," said Mr. Jerome. "I received the support of the Republican organization by the withdrawal of their candidate and the attempt to put me on their ticket. I am simply seeking to ascertain whether or no a majority of the electors desire that I should further serve them as District Attorney of this county, and I should accept, without hesitation, the indorsement of any group of electors whatever their politics might be."

"What machinery, if any, have you now at hand to render your candidacy effective?" Mr. Jerome was asked. He replied:

"I have absolutely none. If anything approaching a majority of electors of this county believe that I have served them faithfully for eight years and desire that I should continue to serve them they will provide such machinery as may be necessary to determine whether a majority of the electors desire that I should continue to serve them as District Attorney."

Mr. Jerome has a number of friends among the Tammany district leaders. That is particularly true about the Sullivan group. Sheriff Thomas F. Foley, one of the most influential of these in Tammany's councils, is a warm admirer of the District Attorney. The same is true about ex-Senator Maurice Featherson of the Twentieth, Senator James J. Frawley of the Twenty-sixth, Fire Commissioner Hayes of the Twenty-eighth, and Thomas E. Rush of the Twenty-ninth.

Mr. Jerome has many friends on the Committee of One Hundred also, and should the question of indorsing his candidacy be brought up there and the proposition be resisted it certainly would not be voted down except after a hard fight.

Congressman Herbert Parsons, President of the Republican County Committee, on the other hand, does not believe in Mr. Jerome's qualities as a vote getter half as much as he did four years ago, when Magistrate Flammer, the Republican candidate, retired and asked his friend to support Mr. Jerome with the result that to every practical purpose he became the Republican candidate for District Attorney, even though his name, for technical reasons, never got on the ballot.

One of the advisers of Mr. Parsons said recently to a friend that in case Mr. Jerome should be indorsed by Tammany Hall the Republicans ought to make an issue of it. He said the well-known hostility of Tammany Hall to Mr. Jerome in his early years in office, which were characterized by such wonderful zeal and independence, and its present attitude, in case the organization should indorse Mr. Jerome, ought to furnish a contrast that would make people sit up and take notice.

After the announcement had been made Mr. Jerome had a talk with Col. Robert Grier Monroe, who has been his close personal and political friend for many years, and who in 1905 was one of the most active among the Jerome nominators who fathered his boom then.

It was said a Jerome headquarters would be opened in a few days, and that the circulation of petition would begin as soon after Labor Day as possible.

DRIVES OUT GAMBLING HOUSE.

Bar Harbor Cottage Establishment Closed After Sheriff's Visit.

Special to The New York Times.

BAR HARBOR, Me., Aug. 23.—The Summer colony had a new topic of conversation to-day when it was made known that a miniature Monte Carlo, which has been conducted at one of the prominent cottages here had been ordered out of town by the Sheriff, and that the lessees of the cottage had been warned that some other Summer resort would be a more congenial place for them.

It has been known for some weeks that the establishment had been conducted in this particular cottage, and that some of the prominent men of the Summer colony had been going there night after night and betting heavily.

The securing of evidence was difficult and the county officers have had their eyes on the place for several weeks. Lately, however, several heavy losses have occurred and the losers have talked freely of their losses. From them and from other sources the officers learned enough to be able to inform the proprietors that it was time play came to an end.

Ordinarily the conduct of affairs at the various clubs is not interfered with by the municipal and county officials. After the lessees of the cottage were told to go or be prosecuted they shipped the gambling paraphernalia away Sunday night. One of the party has left town and the others are expected to leave shortly.

POCKET PICKED OF $15,000.

Newark Woman Misses Bonds and Bankbooks After Visit to New York.

Mrs. Jane Lucas of 72 Richmond Street, Newark, N. J., reported to the police there last midnight that in New York yesterday afternoon—or on her way to Newark last night she lost from a pocket of an underskirt bonds, bankbooks, and money representing a total of $15,000. There were twelve bankbooks, she said, on financial institutions in New York, Paterson, N. J., and England, bonds of the City of Manchester, England, worth $10,000, and Bank of England notes amounting to $1,000.

Mrs. Lucas met her son Samuel in New York in the afternoon to make preparations for a trip to Europe. Later she visited a storehouse at 9 Rivington Street. About 8 o'clock she took a Plank Road trolley car for Newark. After her arrival she found the pocket in which she had kept her money and securities ripped open and the contents gone.

Up to a short time ago she kept the articles in a safe-deposit vault in Paterson, where she formerly lived.

GIRL A HUMAN PINCUSHION.

Sixteen Pins Bent Like Fishhooks Extracted from Her Arm.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., Aug. 23.—Miss Adelina Wyckoff, eighteen years old, employed as a winder in Ashley & Bailey's silk mill, has had sixteen pins taken from her right arm in the last three days. She says she doesn't know how they got there.

Miss Wyckoff first complained about a year ago of a pain in her arm. Her mother found a slight abrasion, but thought nothing of it. Later she concluded that the girl had rheumatism and finally Dr. Flood was called in. He extracted at that time a headless pin, curved like a fishhook.

A few days ago the girl again felt intense pains in her arms. She found a pin protruding and removed it. More pins soon made their appearance and Dr. Flood was again called in and this time took out sixteen pins, all shaped like the first one and blackened.

Dr. Flood thinks the only logical conclusion is that Miss Wyckoff must have swallowed a quantity of pins when a child.

BEATEN AND ROBBED OF $650.

Clothing Manufacturer Loses His Weekly Payroll in Factory Building.

Clifford Schwartz of 261 South Second Street, Brooklyn, senior member of the firm of Schwartz & Heyman, manufacturers of clothing on the sixth floor of the building at 5-11 Hope Street, Brooklyn, came across Williamsburg Bridge yesterday afternoon to draw the money to pay his sixty employes their weekly earnings. He took back $650 wrapped in a newspaper, which he carried under his arm.

He did not notice any one following him. As he reached the top of the first flight of stairs in his own building he was knocked down from behind with a blackjack or some blunt instrument. He was found twenty minutes later by some other tenants of the building. The $650 had been stolen. Mr. Schwartz was treated by Dr. Wilson of the Williamsburg Hospital and then went home.

The police of the Bedford Avenue Station were set to work on the case. Mr. Schwartz said that a discharged clothes presser had said six weeks before that he would get even with the firm for his discharge. The police are trying to locate this man.

PREACHER BUMPED PREACHER

They Were in the Outfield and Senator W. Murray Crane Pitched.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Aug. 23.—When Senator W. Murray Crane went into the box to pitch in the third inning of a baseball game at his Mount Pleasant country place, in Windsor, on Saturday afternoon, the Captain of the opposing team yelled:

"Now, here's where we do things."

One of the early batters up sent a long hit to the field.

"I have it," cried the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church of Boston.

"I have it," also cried the Rev. Franklin Knight, rector of a fashionable Episcopal Church in New Haven.

They collided.

The Rev. Mr. Knight was knocked unconscious, and was taken to his home in a motor car. He has a black eye and is much bruised and lame. He has canceled his pulpit engagements.

Senator Crane felt very bad over the accident and sorry, too, that the batsman had "found him."

SOLD SAND FOR SUGAR; MOB OF 2,000 PURSUES

Grocer Dsuban Paid $8 for a Barrel and Found Only Two Inches of Sugar on the Top.

ROCKS AND RAGS IN IT, TOO

East Side Grocer Discovers the Fraud as Swindlers Flee on Wagon—Two of Three Men Caught.

What the police say was a clever scheme to defraud unsuspecting grocers by foisting upon them barrels supposed to be filled with sugar, but in reality crammed with sand, rocks, and rags, with two inches of sugar on top, was exposed last night, when two men charged with larceny, were arrested by Policeman Murphy of the East Fifty-first Street Station. The arrests were made after the three alleged swindlers had been chased through several streets by an unusual crowd, estimated at fully two thousand men and boys.

The men had a truck upon which were four of the barrels, and the police believed that during yesterday they sold possibly half a dozen or more barrels of the mixed sand and sugar to various grocers.

Early last night three men on a truck drove up to the grocery store of Stephen Dsuban, at 337 East Fifty-fourth Street. One jumped off and entered and asked the grocer if he wished to buy a barrel of sugar for $12. Dsuban said the price was too high, but that he would pay $8 for a barrel. This price was accepted. The three men on the truck carried a barrel of the supposed sugar into the grocery and the $8 was handed over to them. They immediately jumped on the truck and drove off.

Dsuban became suspicious when he noticed the speed of their departure, and he knocked off the head of the barrel. He found two inches of sugar and then came upon a quantity of sand, rocks, and gravel. In another instant he was in pursuit of the fleeing swindlers.

The men had driven eastward in Fifty-fourth Street to First Avenue. The grocer ran after them, and as he did so he shouted to the fleeing sand merchants to halt. A crowd joined in the chase, and one of the men on the truck suddenly lost his nerve and leaped to the ground. This man darted down First Avenue and was lost sight of.

When the two men on the truck reached First Avenue they turned their horse northward and continued to Fifty-second Street. The crowd, increasing in size every minute, kept on the trail and at Fifty-second Street and First Avenue one of the two men on the truck was seen to leap to the pavement. The pursuers kept on after the truck, which, with the last of the three alleged swindlers, turned westward in Fifty-second Street and doubled back.

Policeman Murphy was standing at the corner of Fifty-second Street and First Avenue when the second man jumped from the truck, and he grabbed him. In the meantime the lone man on the truck reached the corner of Fifty-second Street and Third Avenue.

The mob was in full sight and close behind when John Harrison and Joseph Rider jumped for the bridle of the truck horse. They were dragged across the avenue, but managed to stop the horse.

Policeman Murphy, dragging his first prisoner, reached the corner just as Harrison and Rider brought the team to a standstill. The policeman immediately arrested the second man, and then took both to the East Fifty-first Street Station. Hundreds of the crowd followed to the station.

There the second man who jumped from the wagon said he was Joseph Bracken, 24 years old, of 442 East Seventy-fifth Street. The one last arrested said he was Edward Bennett, 34 years old, of 441 East Seventy-sixth Street. They were locked up charged with larceny. The truck and horse were also taken to the station.

ROW OVER SUBWAY TICKET.

Passenger Accused of Offering Only Half a Ticket Is Exonerated.

Fred Fisher, ticket agent on the uptown platform of the Bleecker Street Station of the Subway, appeared as complainant in an assault case in the Night Court last night, but despite the fact that he had two witnesses and a lawyer, the defendant, Harry Greenberg, a harnessmaker of 112 East Eleventh Street, was discharged.

The trouble started in the Bleecker Street Subway Station when Morris Lubert of 79 East 119th Street tried to get by the ticket chopper on half a ticket, as Oliver Kirk, the ticket chopper asserted before Magistrate Krotel. Kirk said that he grabbed Lubert by the arm and that Greenberg interfered. Then, Kirk said, Greenberg struck Fisher in the face when he came to the ticket chopper's aid.

Fisher and Howard Subrich of the signal department of the Subway corroborated Kirk's story, but Greenberg denied that he had attacked the agent. He said he was simply protecting Lubert, a stranger, from attack. Lubert supported Greenberg's statement and the harnessmaker was discharged.

One Killed, Two Hurt as Scaffold Falls

Through the collapse of a scaffold on the building at 158 Chambers Street three men at work on repairs there were injured late yesterday afternoon, one of them so seriously that he died in the Hudson Street Hospital at 9 o'clock last night. He was John Mandella, a carpenter of 425 East 116th Street. Peter Sylvester, also a carpenter, of 440 East 116th Street, and Stevan Starr, a mason, of 425 East 116th Street, escaped with slight bruises.

FEAR ISLANDS ARE GONE.

Acapulco Thinks 'Quake Sunk Clipperton Group in the Sea.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 23.—Dispatches from Acapulco say that the people of that port believe that the Clipperton Islands were swallowed up by the sea during the late earthquake. No word of any kind has come from the islands, and as the neighboring bed of the ocean is known to have been greatly disturbed and a small tidal wave occurred, the port officials at Acapulco are urging the War Department to send out the gunboat General Guerrero "in search of the islands."

The claims of the Acapulcoans have not as yet seriously impressed the War Department.

Federico Gambro, former Sub-Secretary of Foreign Affairs, is now in Europe to present Mexico's claims to the ownership of the islands before the Italian arbitration court.

T. J. LEARY DROPS DEAD.

Firearms Dealer Caught by a Policeman as He Falls in the Street.

Thomas J. Leary, 62 years old, a dealer in firearms and ammunition at 89 Chambers Street, fell dead last night in front of 3 New Chambers Street. Policeman Leddy of the Oak Street Station was near enough to support Mr. Leary as he sank to the pavement. Dr. Spaulding of the Hudson Hospital said death was due to heart failure.

Mr. Leary lived with his two nieces at 212 West 127th Street. He was unmarried, and was a member of the Hardware Club.

ARREST W. K. VANDERBILT, JR.

He Is Accused of Speeding a Motor Car 35 Miles an Hour.

While speeding along West First Street, Mount Vernon, at a thirty-five-mile clip, so the police say, shortly after 4 P. M. yesterday, William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., accompanied by two women, was arrested by Motor Cycle Policeman James J. Reilly.

Mr. Vanderbilt and his companions had just left the Hotel Gramatan, at Bronxville, and were on their way to New York. At Police Headquarters he was allowed to go, after depositing $50 for his appearance before Judge W. G. Gay in the Court of Special Sessions this morning.

Mr. Vanderbilt denies that he was going thirty-five miles an hour.

EYE BLOWN OUT BY A CAP.

Workman Hits It with His Pick and It Explodes.

Angelo Delevat of 309 East 109th Street was working industriously under the eyes of his foreman, swinging a pick in an excavation at Fifth Avenue and Fifty-first Street last night when his pick struck an unexploded firing cap.

The cap went off and almost lifted Delevat out of the hole. His right eye was blown out, his left arm badly mangled, and his legs lacerated. He was taken to Flower Hospital.

The excavation is being made for electric wires. John McGuire of 207 East 173d Street, foreman, was arrested by the police of the East Fifty-first Street Station.

Gypsies Compel Silence by Threatening Witness with Black Art Spell.

Special to The New York Times.

BRANCHVILL, N. J., Aug. 23.—It came out here to-day that roving bands of gypsies have a new way of commanding to silence some more or less ignorant witnesses to their depredations. On Saturday some gypsies went into the garden of Noah H. Hopkins, Mayor of this borough, and began gathering a supply of vegetables and fruits.

Mrs. Alvah Crone, the caretaker of the place, ordered the gypsies to get out. They commanded her to return to the house and hold her tongue or they would cast a spell over her. She went back and permitted them to take what they wanted.

It was only to-day that she would admit that she had seen the gypsies at work. She then explained her silence.

MONKEY HOLDS A RECEPTION.

Mme. Zeggio Introduces to Lenox Pet That Sleeps in Gold Cage.

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 23.—Mme. Camellon Zeggio, lady in waiting in the Court of Queen Marguerita of Italy, gave a reception at the Aspinwall this evening in honor of her marmoset monkey. Society was out in force to meet the diminutive creature, which rested lightly on the arms of its mistress. The monkey, which was bought in South Africa for $1,000, sleeps in a gold cage which cost $5,000.

The marmoset acquitted himself creditably, looking grave when he should and chattering affably at the attempted pleasantries of the guests. The affair was such a decided success that it is understood that an effort will be made to prevail upon Mme. Zeggio to accept an invitation to a reception in Newport in honor of the monkey which has mingled with royalty.

LONG ISLAND TRAIN DERAILED.

Accident at Douglaston, L. I., Delays Traffic Four Hours—None Hurt.

Passengers were thrown from their seats and flung to the floors of the cars of a passenger train that was derailed near Douglaston yesterday morning on the Loug Island Railroad. Traffic was delayed for more than four hours.

The train left Port Washington for the city, arriving at Douglaston at 6:40 o'clock. It was under considerable headway, after leaving the station, when the engine jumped the rails and bumped along on the sleepers. The engineer shut off power and applied the emergency brake, bringing the train to so abrupt a halt that the passengers were thrown from their seats almost before they realized anything was wrong. A few received bruises, but none was injured at all seriously.

Some whose presence in the city at an early hour was imperative got automobile when they learned that hours must pass before a wrecking tram could clear the track, and traveled to their offices in them.

Michigan Store Robbed of Thousands.

JACKSON, Mich., Aug. 23.—The safe in the hardware store of Godfrey & Vervalin, in the village of Parma, ten miles west of this city, was wrecked by burglars early to-day. Farmers' notes for $3,500 were secured, also stocks and bonds to the value of several thousand dollars.

CURTISS MAKES NEW RECORD AT RHEIMS

American Circles Course in Little Over Eight Minutes—Rivals Strewn Over Field.

PAULHAM SHARES HONORS

Frenchman Makes Two Flights of Over 30 Miles Each—Most Others Fly Short Distances.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

RHEIMS, Aug. 23.—Another score for America marked the second day of aviation week, the feature of the first day having been the performances of the three Wright aeroplanes with French pilots, Glenn H. Curtiss, an American in an American machine, to-day made a new speed record, covering one lap of the course—6 1-5 miles—in 8:35 3-5, according to the official timer.

The correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES was the first to congratulate Curtiss and tell him the official time of his tour de piste. The aviator said, in the most surprised manner that it was little more than a joy ride.

"I might have done better if the motor had warmed up for the second round," he added. "But you should have been with me and written a picture story of the scene as I saw it from aloft with wrecked fliers strewn over the course on the further side of the field."

The second man to congratulate Curtiss was an Englishman who gave his name as Shaw Kennedy, and asked if the aviator was prepared to receive an offer for a machine, and engaged in a mysterious conference with Cortlandt Field Bishop, who says that the machine is not for sale at any price just now. The impression was that Kennedy was an agent of the British Government.

British Minister Interested.

Yesterday Mr. Lloyd-George expressed to me his particular interest in the Curtiss aeroplane, though the Chancellor of the Exchequer was brought here by Sir Henry Norman, who is reputed to be not uninterested in the plans of Hart O. Berg, manager for the Wrights. Berg was in conspicuous attendance on the Minister, but Curtiss's shed was the only one that Mr. Lloyd-George visited for a second inspection of a machine.

The Bétheny aerodrome is now recognized as primarily a field of contest between the French and American aeroplane. The fact that the latter seems likely to carry off most of the honors has caused no little feeling. Considerable feeling also has developed between the Wright and Curtiss companies. The former is represented prominently by three French pilots, the latter by an American piloting his own machine. This feeling was increased to-day by the news that the Wrights were suing Curtiss personally. Americans here generally regret that this has occurred during the present week. Their interest in the contests is unabated. Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt was on hand among the earliest comers at the aerodrome this morning.

Paulham Shares Curtiss's Honors.

RHEIMS, France, Aug. 23.—Glenn H. Curtiss, the American aviator, and M. Paulham, representing France, divided the honors of the second day of aviation week, the former making a remarkable flight just before dusk, in which he lowered the speed record for the course, which measures six and one-fifth miles, to 8 minutes 35 3-5 seconds; the latter making two impressive high altitude flights of 49½ and 56 kilometers (30 2-3 and 34¾ miles) respectively, in the endurance test for the Prix de la Champagne.

Curtiss's performance began just as the time limit for the start of the Prix de la Champagne was expiring, when the American enthusiasts had abandoned hope of seeing their representative take the field. Amid the unbounded jubilation of the French spectators, Blériot, with his powerful 80-horse apower monoplane, only a few minutes before had clipped sixteen seconds off Lefebvre's record made yesterday. Suddenly at one end of the field a cry went up: "The American is starting." All eyes were strained to that particualr point, where Cortlandt Field Bishop, President of the Aero Club of America, and a crowd of other admirers surrounded Curtiss.

After a preliminary run along the ground of one hundred yards the machine rose lightly and shot by the tribunes at a height of sixty feet. It was going at a terrific pace, with the wings level as a plain. Curtiss made the last turn under the mistaken impression that the finish line was closer. He descended so close to earth that many thought he touched, but, perceiving his error, he mounted quickly and easily, and crossed the line majestically. An instant later the signal was hoisted that he had made a record.

Rivals Strewn About the Course.

Mr. Curtiss said that he had not pushed his machine to the limit of its speed, and laughingly declined to say more, adding that the most interesting incident of his flight was the view he got of his fallen rivals strewn around the course.

It is the intention of the American aviator now to await patiently the international event for the James Gordon Bennett Cup on Saturday, for which he is again the favorite. After that he will try for the Prix de la Vitesse, or speed prize, the final of which will be contested on Sunday.

Paulham alone made a record in the endurance test to-day, but Lefebvre, Sommer, Sanchis-Pesa, Blériot, Delagrange, Lambert, Cockburn, Bunau-Varilla, Gobron, Latham, Tissandier, and Farman qualified with flights varying from 200 meters (220 yards) to 25 kilometers, (15½ miles,) the majority contenting themselves with covering a sufficient distance to get within the limit. During Paulham was completing his fourth round, and between him and Blériot and Lefebvre, the two latter outspeeding the high-flying Paulham. Blériot appeared while Paulham was completing his fourth round, and with his eighty horse power monoplane swiftly overhauled and passed under the biplane, leaving it far behind.

Two of his monoplanes having been put out of commission by a slight accident in landing, Latham succeeded in making his best flight with an untried machine with an aluminium propeller. Until Saturday, when the international event will be decided, the flying is likely to be less interesting than during the first two days, but popular as well as scientific and expert enthusiasm over aviation week shows no sign of abatement. The policing of the course by French soldiers and mounted dragoons is the subject of general satisfaction. Squadrons of dragoons inside the field are often compelled to escape on the gallop from some low-flying machine.

Surprised at Wright Suit.

Mr. Curtiss to-day expressed great surprise at the decision of the Wright brothers to sue him personally. He insists that the Wrights never have specified completely wherein he has infringed upon their patents. Mr. Bishop, President of the Herring-Curtiss Company, maintains that the Wright claim for a basic patent is not good and that Mr. Curtiss does not employ the warping wing principle, which is a distinctive feature of the Wright machine.

The partisans of Mr. Curtiss are manifesting considerable bitterness against the Wrights for bringing this suit at the moment when Mr. Curtiss is the sole representative of the United States in a foreign flying contest, especially as they declined to enter this contest themselves, and the Wright aeroplanes here are classed as French machines.

It is understood that the Wright brothers have always insisted that most of the foreign types of flying machines were infringements upon their patents, but they have purposely refrained from bringing suit in these cases until Aviation Week should have demonstrated the superiority of their machines. Such suits will then be brought.

Latham to Fly for France.

Hubert Latham has been chosen as the third aviator to represent France in the contest for the International Cup, the big event of the week, which will be run off next Saturday. The others are MM. Blériot and Lefebvre. This decision was reached by the judges this morning after careful consideration of the elimination contests held yesterday. Tissandier, Paulham, and Sommer are alternates to Latham. Only one other Wright machine, that operated by Schreck, remains to compete in this event.

The events for which the flights to-day were made were the Grand Prix de la Champagne and of the City of Rheims, and continuations in the Prix du Tour de Piste and the Prix des Aeronauts. The first event carries prizes amounting to $20,000, the first prize being $10,000, and the six aeroplanes traveling the greatest distance without touching the ground or replenishing their supplies of fuel and oil being all entitled to a share in the money. Strict watch was kept that no aviator touched the ground or came within a certain specified distance of it. Each competitor was obliged to put in an appearance on the opening day, but most of the pilots elected to postpone their real efforts until toward evening.

In contrast to yesterday, blue skies, sunshine, and only a trace of wind made ideal conditions for the aviators to-day, and thousands of spectators came down on the early trains from Paris. When the dirigible balloon Colonel Renard appeared over the field at 10 o'clock this morning, having come from Meaux, the tribunes and fences lining the field already were black with people. The Renard, which is the first of the dirigible balloons to arrive, carried out a series of evolutions above the aerodrome.

Among the hundreds of Americans here are Mr. and Mrs. George Gould, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Ned Goodwin, William P. Crane, and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Kittridge of Cleveland.

WRIGHT AIRSHIPS UNDELIVERED

Delays of French Makers Appear to Have Left Opening for Other Makes.

The difficulties which have been briefly referred to in the cable dispatches to THE NEW YORK TIMES regarding the delay on the part of the French syndicate engaged in building the Wright aeroplanes to make deliveries have been discussed here in aviation circles with considerable curiosity. In view of the fact that a French syndicate purchased the exclusive right to manufacture the Wright machine last Fall—at which time the statement was made that a number of the machines, at one time said to be fifty, would be ready for delivery this year—the general impression had been that no time would be lost in putting the Wright machines as widely on the market as possible before dangerous rivals were able to enter the field commercially. In a letter received from Paris a few days ago by a well-known automobilist of this city who is also interested in aeronautic matters, the writer said:

"The Wrights have sold about twenty machines, but only two or three have been delivered, for many reasons, and I am afraid they will soon be behind on account of the recent records made by the others. A good many orders for Wright machines paid in advance have been canceled and purchasers are on the lookout for other machines."

That the time is ripe for the sale of a number of practical aeroplanes to private individuals is clearly recognized by the leading French aviators, and both the Voisin and Blériot factories are now making machines, the first batch of ten Blériot monoplanes being promised by the middle of September. The acknowledged ability of the Curtiss biplane is regarded as giving it a decided commercial advantage in Europe, provided it demonstrates its all around excellence during the big races at Rheims this week. Cortlandt Field Bishop, who was one of the organizers of the Herring-Curtiss Company and is one of its large stockholders is naturally interested in the showing of the Curtiss machine, as thereby an entering wedge may be made for the sale of Curtiss aeroplanes in France.

RUSSIA'S BALLOON WRECKED.

Dirigible Built for Czar's Government Drops Crew in River.

PARIS, Aug. 23.—The Bayard-Clement dirigible balloon, built recently by the Bayard-Clement Company for the Russian Government, was wrecked near Maisons-Laffitte to-day during its preliminary trial. The aviators on board, including Col. Nach of the Russian Army, were not injured.

The airship made its ascent successfully, remained in the air some time, and then came down without damage. But while on the ground a violent gust of wind tore the balloon from the grasp of the forty men who were holding it. It was thrown against some trees and telegraph poles near by, ripping the gas bag to pieces. The ship then fell into the River Seine. The four occupants had stuck to the car during these happenings. Upon landing in the river they left the shattered ship and swam for the shore. They were picked up by small boats.

By the terms of the contract with the Russian Government this balloon was to have maintained an altitude of 3,600 to 4,500 feet for one hour. Col. Nach described his experience as follows:

"We made a wonderful ascension, attaining to a height of 4,500 feet. This beats the world's height record for dirigible balloons. We remained aloft for over an hour, never coming below 3,600 feet. Just after the car had come down it was struck by a gust of wind and wrenched from the hands of the men holding the guideropes. Our fuel was exhausted, and we had practically no control. The balloon came down a second time, and was ripped open by contact with trees. It then fell into the Seine, and we swam until we were picked up."

The damaged airship was packed on an auto wagon and conveyed to its shed, at Sartrouville. The aeronaut, Capazza, who had charge of the airship, stated that after the collision with the tree and the release of the balloon its rapid descent was inevitable, and it was steered in the direction of the river, where a fall would cause less damage than on land.

It is believed that the Bayard-Clement can be repaired.

The Bayard-Clement dirigible balloon was built in Paris last Fall. It was about 180 feet long and had a capacity of 3,500 cubic meters. The car of the craft was built of steel tubes. The airship was fitted with a steel-covered engine house and a shelter for the pilot and his passengers. The motor was so attached to the frame of the craft as to prevent, as far as possible, the vibration from being transmitted to the framework. The balloon was driven by a wooden propeller about fifteen feet in diameter. This propeller had a speed of 350 revolutions a minute.

The Bayard-Clement made a successful trial trip several months ago, traveling from Sartrouville to Saint Germain and Maisons-Laffitte.

AIRSHIP OVER MONTCLAIR.

Residents There Puzzled by a Mysterious Machine in Flight.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Aug. 23.—Residents of the north end of this town last evening again saw a mysterious aeroplane passing over that section of Montclair. The machine was seen before several days ago. The aeroplane flew high, and as it passed over Upper Montclair it emitted a great puff of smoke that observers thought indicated an explosion. The flying machine, however, was not halted in its course, though it came closer to the earth.

A number of people thought the aeroplane was that constructed by Alfred P. Morgan and Harold H. Dodd, young men of this town. They denied, however, that they have been making secret flights. Their airship, which they have at 15 Appleton Place, is not quite ready to fly. The motor arrived only to-day, and until this has been thoroughly tested no flights will be attempted.

The mysterious airship which was seen passing over the town last evening disappeared to the northward, and is believed to have come down in some isolated section of the country where some inventor has his headquarters.

MONOPLANE OF BAMBOO.

Invention of Washington Mechanic Has Many Novel Features.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Still another aeroplane will soon have a trial near Washington. This machine, which is the invention of J. H. Smidley, a Washington mechanic, is a monoplane constructed chiefly of bamboo, held together at the joints with metal collars. The machine will be tried out at the Benning race track, said Mr. Smidley to-day, and if his eighteen-horse-power engine develops the needed power he is confident he will demonstrate a machine of such carrying power as to enable him to book for an extended exhibition tour, if the War Department does not acquire the craft.

The machine has been in process of construction here for several months. If it proves to be of man-carrying strength Mr. Smidley expects to improve its model still further, and perhaps to change the material used from bamboo to steel. The machine is said to weigh only 225 pounds. The main planes are in the form of huge horizontally extended wings a little above the centre of the rectangular box. They do not quite meet in the middle of the monoplane, the space between being left for the passage of air to increase the stability of the machine while in flight. There is a smaller rectangular plane at the top and in front, and a semicircular tail at the end tending to give force and aft stability, but both permanently fixed in place and having nothing to do with the steering of the machine.

The steering device is one of the novel features. It is semicircular in shape, with the diameter of the circle forward. Pulling down either half of this semicircle acts on the air like beating water with the oar of a boat and tends to throw the machine around. Dropping both of these forward rudders will send the machine up in the air and elevating them both will guide it down. The whole of this steering device is controlled from a bicycle handlebar set in the centre of the machine. The operator's seat is just back of this handlebar and forward of the motor.

The machine runs on very small ball-bearing rollers and rises off a track, but without the aid of a falling weight. It is possible that skids will be put under the machine for landing before a trial is made, as Mr. Smidley thinks the rollers are a little too small for operating on a dirt surface.

Bishop in Bennett Cup Balloon Race.

Word has just been received at the Aero Club of America that Cortlandt Field Bishop, President of the club, has consented to act as the aid to E. W. Mix, who has been named as America's pilot in this year's international balloon race for the Bennett Cup. The contest will be held at Zurich, Switzerland, on Oct. 3. This will be the fourth competition for the prize, the trophy now being held by the Swiss Aero Club. Mr. Mix was Alfred Leblanc's aid in 1907 in the French balloon Isle de France in the St. Louis race, and got second place. Mr. Bishop writes that they will use in the race the balloon America II., built by Mallet of Paris last year.

Balky Motor Stops Willard's Flight.

MINEOLA, L. I., Aug. 23.—Charles F. Willard, who has been making flights here since the departure of Glenn H. Curtiss for France, worked all day over his motor, hoping to make a flight this evening. The conditions were not right and the motor did not behave well, so the flight was abandoned. As soon as this was determined upon Mr. Willard and his men started to dismantle the aeroplane, preparatory to boxing its parts and shipping them to Toronto, where he will give exhibitions.

KNOWING WHERE YOU STAND

Consider what it would mean to you if you could have each month a clear, comparative statement of every significant condition and tendency in your business.

Such a statement should include:

(1) An Operating Statement, showing exact conditions and results in each department of a business—whether manufacturing or trading—with weaknesses, bad tendencies, abnormal costs or expenses, brought out, without digging through records or making a physical examination.

(2) A Financial Statement, showing exact conditions of a business under every head, in dollars and cents, providing an analysis of working capital, and a complete and accurate interpretation of every financial resource.

All these at the end of each month instead of end of season—enabling you, if there is something going wrong, to stop it before it has done serious harm.

We solicit an interview.

WRIGHT TO ATTEMPT LONG FLIGHTS HERE

Signs a Contract with Hudson-Fulton Committee for Exhibitions in His Aeroplane.

MAY SAIL DOWN THE BAY

Curtiss Also to be Here, and It Is Hoped to Have Blériot, Latham, and Delagrange.

Wilbur Wright has signed a contract with the Hudson-Fulton Commission to give a series of flights in one of his aeroplanes during the celebration, which begins next month. This is the first contract for a public exhibition signed by either of the Wrights, all previous flights having been made for the sole purpose of commercially exploiting their invention.

Wilbur Wright's exhibition will afford New Yorkers their first opportunity to witness the feats of a man who has set the world talking of his mastery of the air and with an estimated attendance of at least 10,000,000 persons at the celebration he will have the largest gathering in his career and the largest that ever watched an aviator.

The Wrights have refused a large number of generous offers to give exhibition flights, but viewed the coming celebration in a patriotic light, and so arranged their plans that Wilbur Wright was able to remain in this country especially for the celebration flights, while his brother Orville went abroad to attend to their business affairs there.

Glenn Curtiss of Hammondsport, N. Y., who is now at Rheims for the international contest, has also signed a contract with the Celebration Commission for a series of flights. He will not get back to America from his European campaign until a short time before the celebration, but will have everything in readiness for his flights.

James M. Beck, Chairman of the Aeronautics Committee of the commission, yesterday authorized the following statement:

"I have received the contract which Wilbur Wright signed with the Hudson-Fulton Celebration Commission to give a series of flights with his aeroplane during the celebration.

"Our committee originally planned nothing more pretentious than a flight from one bank of the Hudson to the other, but so rapidly have events moved in the art of aviation that both Mr. Curtiss and Mr. Wright are planning far more remarkable flights for the Hudson-Fulton celebration. Both aviators have given their promise to the committee to make the best possible flights that the state of the art and the weather conditions will permit.

"A complete circuit of New York by the Hudson River, New York Bay, East River, and the Harlem River is within the possibilities, but whether this be accomplished or not, people who attend the celebration may be assured that, unless insuperable weather obstacles prevent, both Curtiss and Wright will make flights that will make history. A flight down the Hudson and around New York Bay will probably be witnessed by the greatest number who have ever beheld a flight, and it may be questioned whether any more imposing place could be selected for such a spectacle than that of New York Harbor."

At the Rheims contest there are nearly thirty contestants, and several of these, among them Blériot, Latham, and Delagrange, have signified their desire to take part, and the Aeronautics Committee now has their proposals under consideration.

RHEIMS, Aug. 23.—Cortlandt F. Bishop, representing the Aero Club of America, to-day received definite assurances from Jacques Verne that he would send a small portable dirigible balloon, the Zodiac, to appear at the Hudson-Fulton celebration in New York next month.

ASK FOR NEW COURT BUILDING

Magistrate Would Tear Down Old Essex Market Structure.

At a special meeting of the Board of Magistrates yesterday afternoon in the West Side Court Building, Magistrates House, Butts, Herbert, Moss, and Corrigan were appointed a committee to cooperate with the committee recently appointed by the Grand Jury to impress the city authorities with the need for a new building for the Essex Market Court. Magistrate Cornell said the old building ought to be razed to the ground.

Magistrate Butts wanted to include in a resolution dealing with this subject the statement that the Jefferson Market Court also needed extensive changes, but this was defeated on the ground that it was better to work for one thing at a time. Magistrate Butts said that the court room at Jefferson Market was so close to the elevated station that at times it was well nigh impossible to hear anything said.

Col. Charles J. Crowley, Chief Clerk of the Essex Market Court, had sent in his resignation, and it was accepted at yesterday's meeting. On that account Magistrate House did not prefer charges against him. He had intended doing so.

HAMMOND WANTS STOCK BACK

Manufacturer Meant Gift to Employes Not to Go Into Effect Till His Death.

Supreme Court Justice Giegerich heard argument yesterday and reserved decision as to the legal standing of the stockholders of the Hammond Typewriter Company, involving an alleged gift of fifty-two and fifty-five shares of the company's stock by James B. Hammond to a score of the company's oldest employes.

Counsel for Mr. Hammond applied to the court to have made permanent a temporary injunction restraining the defendants or beneficiaries from appropriating, under the deed of gift, the controlling stock in the company, and to prevent them from taking action detrimental to the interests of Mr. Hammond, through whose efforts, counsel alleged, the Hammond Company was successful.

According to the story told in court, Mr. Hammond in February last, believing that he was very ill, executed a document which made the defendants, John M. Bancroft and others, trustees of his fifty-two shares of stock to distribute them as they deemed fit, among such employes as were entitled to participate by reason of long service. He indorsed over in blank, it was said, his certificates of stock to the trustees.

In the following May an attempt was made to declare Mr. Hammond incompetent, which resulted in his twice being declared mentally sound. In June he went to Europe, and while there, his counsel said, he received notice that the trustees had made the distribution of the stock, which, it was alleged, the donor understood was only to be made in case of his death, believing he had reserved the power to waive the right of such apportionment in case of recovery.

On his return to New York Mr. Hammond got back some of the distributed shares, except those which had been given out to employes and which were canceled, and had others issued to him. The fifty-two shares, said his attorney, although of the par value of only $100 each, were worth more than $1,000,000.

His counsel asserted that, still acting under the supposed authority of the deed of gift and five shares of stock given them by his client to qualify as Directors, the trustees in June last had postponed a meeting of the corporation until December and had taken other steps to insure their control of the business. Under these conditions Mr. Hammond applied for an injunction to be issued; that the deed of gift, which he had given in a spirit of generosity might be held in abeyance until passed on by the court.

Counsel for the beneficiaries, in opposing the motion, said that Mr. Hammond's employes had worked for small wages, relying upon the promise of Mr. Hammond to give them a portion of his stock holdings. He said that Mr. Hammond would not be injured by the case remaining as it was, and offered to consent to the appointment of a referee that the issues might be tried out before the trial of the case.

HEINZE ASSETS NOT PROBED.

Defendant's Examination in Suit to Recover $32,353 Postponed.

Otto C. and Arthur P. Heinze, together with Max H. Schmultze, appeared yesterday before Supreme Court Justice Goff in obedience to an order issued by the Justice directing them to submit to examination in supplemental proceedings as to their ability to pay a judgment for $32,353 obtained against them by Anita Howell on Jan. 30, 1907. The matter went over, however, until Aug. 31.

The judgment arose out of the action of Anita Howell against Alphonse Chrislieb, Daniel Lamm, the Heinze brothers, and Schmultze. Lamm and Schmultze, formerly in the employ of Heinze & Co., went into the glove business, and their accounts were alleged to have been guaranteed by the Heinzes.

The plaintiff sued the guarantors and obtained judgment, which was affirmed by the Court of Appeals. The Aetna Indemnity Company, which had bonded the judgment on appeal, then purchased the judgment, and is now trying to collect.

The Heinzes claim that the indemnity company agreed that no proceedings to collect should be taken before May, 1910.

TWO WOMEN KILLED IN AUTO.

Locomotive Runs Into Touring Car—Five Others Injured.

KANKAKEE, Ill., Aug. 23.—Mrs. George Granger, wife of a retired Kankakee merchant, and Miss Genevieve Rabig, an elocution teacher, of Chicago, were instantly killed and five others in a touring car were seriously injured today, when the machine was run over by a Big Four locomotive and caboose in Kankakee.

The party was on the way to Mound Grove Cemetery. A string of cars on a side track obstructed the view of the chauffeur and of the engineer. The injured are: George Granger, husband of the woman killed; Miss Amelia Fortin, sister of Mrs. Granger; Miss Jeanette Granger, a daughter; Paul Granger, a son, and Ira Dole, the chauffeur. All were severely hurt except the chauffeur.

Miss Jeanette Granger was found between the bodies of her mother and Miss Rabig. She was rescued thirty minutes after the accident by jacking up the caboose.

SEES FLEET TARGET PRACTICE

Acting Secretary Winthrop Watches the Big Guns in Action.

NORFOLK, Va., Aug. 23.—Acting Secretary of the Navy Beekman Winthrop was with Real Admiral Schroeder's Atlantic battleship fleet to-day on the southern drill grounds off Cape Henry, where the fleet is now engaged in deep sea evolutions and target work.

The target work to-day consisted of gunnery aim at target rafts at anchor while the ships steamed over the drill grounds at different speeds. Secretary Winthrop during the day transferred by launch from one battleship to the other as they were called to the target ranges. It was his desire to witness the behavior of the big guns while in actual operation and this could only be done on shipboard where the gunnery practices were in progress and the guns were being fired.

Mr. Winthrop is expected to remain at sea with the fleet all of to-night so as to enable him to witness the night target practice made possible by the powerful searchlights carried by the warships.

HELD AS EMBEZZLER.

F. H. Potter of New York Found by Philadelphia Detective.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23.—Frank H. Potter, said to be the manager of the Electric Equipment Company of New York City, was arrested to-night on the charge of grand larceny. He is wanted in New York.

Detective Emanuel saw Potter standing on the corner of Third and Chestnut Streets shortly after midnight, and, as the description tallied with that of the man wanted, he placed him under arrest.

Word was received at Police Headquarters last night from Philadelphia of the arrest of Frank H. Potter. The complainant against Potter is Eugene J. Weinberger of 200 Second Avenue. According to the police, Weinberger answered an advertisement for a partner, and as a result met Potter, to whom he handed $750. The warrant for Potter's arrest was issued by Magistrate Breen, in the Tombs Court, on June 11, and it charges him with stealing $750.

RECOVER AMERICAN'S BODY.

That of G. B. Smith, ex-Gov. Hoke Smith's Nephew, Drowned in Chagres.

PANAMA, Aug. 23.—The body of Gordon B. Smith of Atlanta, Ga., the nephew of ex-Gov. Hoke Smith, was recovered from the Chagres River to-day.

Young Smith, who was an engineer, was drowned while making a survey.

M'CLELLAN MAKES FLYING TRIP HOME

Says He's "Out of Politics for Good" After Conferences with Various City Officials.

WON'T DISCUSS BINGHAM

Nor the Gaynor Boom for Mayor—Curious About Saratoga Conference—Is to Lecture at Princeton.

Mayor McClellan broke into his vacation to return to town yesterday. His appearance in the City Hall long before office hours was just as unexpected as was his return on the eve of the hearing on the Building Code. Only Acting Mayor McGowan and Assistant Corporation Counsel Crowell, who is assigned to the Mayor's office as legal adviser, had been informed of his coming. He will return to Maine this evening. In an interview, he said he was "out of politics for good," and seemed to mean it.

The Mayor spent most of the day in conferences with Police Commissioner Baker, Commissioner Bensel of the Board of Water Supply that is supervising the construction of the Ashokan Dam, and President Polk of the Civil Service Board. Herman Ridder and Edgar B. Schiff, Secretary to the Bridge Department, also called, and were with the Mayor for some time.

There was much speculation regarding the Mayor's reason for breaking into his vacation. Some of those who called on the Mayor have been regarded as his political advisers, but they are city officials, too, and there was nothing to bear out any supposition that they called other than in their official capacity.

All through the forenoon and the early afternoon the Mayor denied himself to the reporters, but later in the afternoon, after his callers had left, he consented to an interview.

"I have come back only for a brief stay," he said. "I will remain until tomorrow evening, when I return to Maine to continue my vacation, which I spend very quietly and very pleasantly at Winter Harbor. I shall be back at my desk next week to continue here until the last of the year."

The Mayor said that his long talk with Commissioner Baker and his somewhat shorter talk with Herman Ridder had been in connection with the police arrangements for the prospective Hudson-Fulton celebration. Commissioner Baker will, of course, have charge of the police arrangements. Mr. Ridder is a member of the Hudson-Fulton Committee.

The Mayor made inquiry of the reporters regarding recent political developments, but declined to make any comment on the situation. He would not comment on the Gaynor boom, or any of the other booms that have visited town while the weather has been hot.

"I am out of politics for good," he said, smilingly. A moment later he added that while away in Maine he had been preparing lectures to be delivered at Princeton University. The first in the series, the Mayor said, would be delivered in November or December, when his term will be drawing to a close.

"Will you say anything about the Bingham magazine articles dealing with his relations to you?" was a question asked.

"No," the Mayor said shortly.

"Will you have anything to say on the subject later on?"

"Not a word," said the Mayor.

The only thing the Mayor would say in reference to the prospective Saratoga Conference was to admit that he had not been invited to it. He wanted to know who would be there.

"A lot of old line Democrats, intent upon the elimination of Mr. Conners as head of the State organization," said a reporter.

"And the substitution of Mr. Murphy?" asked the Mayor rather pointedly.

MORTIMER TO CLAIM JEWELS.

Several Applicants in Jersey City for the Banker's $5,000 Reward.

The $75,000 worth of diamonds and other jewels, according to the latest appraisal, left on June 29 last on an Erie ferryboat by Richard Mortimer, the Manhattan banker, in his hurry to catch a train for his home in Tuxedo, and which were picked up by Paolo Cantanella, a laborer, of Jersey City, and found at 365 Third Street, Jersey City, Cantanella's home, last Saturday, are still at Police Headquarters in Jersey City awaiting the arrival of their owner.

The jewels are in the custody of Capt. James F. Larkins of the Detective Bureau, who was called up yesterday on the telephone by a member of the jewelry firm of Dreiscer & Co., in Manhattan, who said he would call to-day with Mr. Mortimer to look at the jewels, the firm having set the stones for Mr. Mortimer.

It is understood that not only one stone, a small diamond, is missing from the tiara. The set includes a massive bow knot brooch of diamonds with a large emerald in the centre, a tiara of diamonds of all sizes, a diamond-studded watch, and a ruby tiara. The Dreiscer firm fixes the value of the jewels at $75,000.

The reward of $5,000 for their recovery will have several claimants. Cantanella claims the reward. G. B. Davidson, a jeweler, who furnished the police with a slight clue to them, is another claimant, and likewise Benjamin Tracy, a lawyer, who told the police where the stones could be found, and the detectives who found them may demand their share.

CHILD REUNITES PARENTS.

"Why Haven't I Any Mother?" He Asked, and Father Brought Him Back.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Kent, having just been reunited in Bayonne, N. J., their old home, after five years of separation, are on their way to Toronto, Canada, where they will make their home for the future.

In 1904 Mr. Kent left his home in Bayonne, carrying with him his seventeen months old son. His wife, aided by the police, searched for the two of them everywhere. Through the British Embassy she located her husband at Toronto, where he was living with his mother.

Mrs. Kent, who had meanwhile been living with her mather at 363 Avenue C, Bayonne, set out for Toronto, but when she got there she was told that her husband, strangely enough, had just started for Bayonne. Hurrying back, she and he met, were reconciled, and now they have made up their differences and have gone away to live together.

Mr. Kent told his wife that one day the little boy asked him very seriously:

"Papa, why haven't I got any mother like all the rest of the boys?"

Then he started for Bayonne.

Direct Primary Hearing in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—New York's legislative committee which was appointed to investigate the workings of direct primary laws in various States, began a two days' session here to-day. Master in Chancery G. Fred Rush outlined the provisions of the now defunct Illinois law, which failed to survive a test case in the Supreme Court of the State. Mr. Rush declared in favor of direct primaries, severely scoring the party caucus as undemocratic.

Electric Train Kills Two Women.

CAMDEN, N. J., Aug. 23.—Mrs. Jane Frazier, 40 years old, of Westville, N. J., and Miss Griswell, 22 years old, of Philadelphia, were instantly killed by an electric train bound for Atlantic City to-night at Westville. Miss Griswell had been visiting Mrs. Frazier, and the two women were walking to the station when the train struck them at a crossing.

FINN RAPS AUTO SPEED LAW.

Disgusting, He Says, and Dodges Bail Acceptance Clause.

Jason Westerfield and Lawrence Timmons of Greenwich, Conn., whose fine homes are on adjoining grounds, came down to Manhattan in their automobiles Sunday and were arrested at different spots on the Pelham Parkway for speeding. They left their machines for security, went home, and returned yesterday morning to be arraigned in Morrisania Court.

"I do not want to hold you gentlemen for the Court of Special Sessions," said Magistrate Finn, "but I am compelled to. Can you each put up $100 cash bond?"

Neither man had the sum, but Mr. Westerfield offered property as bail.

"But I can't take it, Mr. Westerfield, I am very sorry to say," said the Magistrate. "The law will not permit me to accept personal bail in a case of this kind; $100 cash must be deposited with the City Chamberlain before I can release you. And let me say right here that such a law is outrageous and disgusting. Here are you two gentleman in this predicament, you have not the necessary cash with you, and I must lock you up if you don't get it.

"If you were a couple of petty crooks and were brought here I could release you in some small real estate bail. But you have committed the enormous crime of letting your machines go a little too fast. You are in danger of going to a cell because you can't get $100 cash each.

"But we will fix things this way. Mr. Westerfield, on the property you own in New York I cannot release you, but if you offer it for bond for Mr. Timmons I will let him go. In the meantime I parole you so that you can go somewhere near to get $100 cash or a bondsman with property other than yourself, and the officer can go in your car with you."

Mr. Timmons permitted his friend and neighbor to bail him out, and then Mr. Westerfield jumped in his car to go after the necessary security.

Major Lentz Opens His Campaign.

Major Carl Lentz of Newark opened his campaign for election as Chairman of the Essex County Committee at a mass meeting in Bergen Hall, Newark, N. J., last night. Until his resignation two years ago for harmony reasons which did not materialize, Major Lentz had been County Chairman for fourteen years. Last night he declared that he worked against Colby and the New Idea faction of the party last year because he regards them as independents with Republican tendencies rather than Republicans with independent tendencies.

STRIKERS ARE COWED BY ANGRY POLICE

Peonage Charge Falls.

Effort to have President Hoffstot of the Pressed Steel Car Company arrested for peonage has apparently failed. United States District Attorney Jordan refused to-day to sign his authorization to the information entered before him by Albert Vamos, through the local Austro-Hungarian counsel, his attorney, charging Hoffstot and Samuel Cohen, labor organizer for the company at the plant, with peonage under the provisions of the Federal laws.

Mr. Jordan explained his position by stating that no action on any information would be taken by him without previous investigation by the United States authorities of the truth of the allegations. Then, he said, if the conditions alleged were found to be true on the statements of the so-called strikebreakers in the plant, a proper information might be drawn up against the car company as a corporation and warrants would be served on Hoffstot and the Directors and other officials of the concern to appear in court and defend themselves.

The present information mentions Hoffstot and Cohen as individual defendants. This, Mr. Jordan says, is a wrong procedure, for the reason that Hoffstot has not been in Pittsburg for some time, and, therefore, could have no direct personal connection with the charges involved. Cohen, as well as Hoffstot, would say he was simply acting for the company, and not for himself. This would leave the company alone liable.

REINFORCEMENTS FOR POLICE.

Thirty Constables Rushed to McKees Rocks from Station at Wyoming.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., Aug. 23.—Thirty State troopers, mounted and well armed, under command of Lieut. Weatherly, arrived here at 8 o'clock to-night from their barracks at Wyoming, six miles from here. The men and horses were at once taken to cars on the Pennsylvania Railroad, and left here on the 9 o'clock train for McKees Rocks.

WANTS GOVERNMENT INQUIRY.

Federation of Labor to Request Investigation of Car Company's Methods.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Secretary Morrison of the American Federation of Labor proposes to ask the Department of Commerce and Labor to investigate the conditions under which men are working for the Pressed Steel Car Company at McKees Rocks, Penn. Not one of the men on strike, he said, is affiliated with the Federation of Labor.

"These workers," he said to-day, "have been confounded with the strikers of the Iron and Steel Workers of America. There is no relation whatever between these two classes of workers. The pressed steel workers are car workers, and if organized would come under the jurisdiction of the Car Workers' International Union. Investigation has shown me that there is not a member of that union working for the Pressed Steel Car Company.

"By the introduction of foreign labor that company has reduced the wages and conditions of these men to such an extent that these aliens, who do not speak our language, have revolted and are struggling to obtain living conditions. An investigation of these conditions by the Government would reveal astonishing methods. I have in mind now a request to the Department of Commerce and Labor to investigate these conditions."

BLOW AT LAWLESS SALOONS.

The Fourteen Will Attempt to Get Brewers to Withdraw Their Backing.

The Committee of Fourteen, which was formed for the purpose of suppressing Raines law hotels, according to announcement made yesterday, has entered into negotiations with brewing concerns and surety companies with a view of establishing an "unofficial discretion" that would have the effect of preventing the opening of saloons or hotels of a disorderly character in the future.

The Committee of Fourteen says it was compelled to take this action on account of defects in the Raines law which does not give the officials of the Excise Department any discretion in their action on the applications for a license. The denial of a license under the present law is only possible as part of the penalty upon conviction for violation of the law.

In carrying out their new policy the committee has sent to the Brewers' Board of Trade, of which Col. Jacob Ruppert, Jr., is President, a list of all places in the Borough of Manhattan where unsatisfactory conditions have been found by the committee, with the request that the brewing interests cause them the financial assistance on which many such establishments are dependent for their existence. A similar list has been sent, too, to the Presidents of twenty-two surety companies which are engaged in the business of writing the bonds without which no liquor license can be obtained.

"The State, by a bad law, has created disorderly saloons and hotels. We do not consider it possible that your company would knowingly join in such business which would be the result of your writing the bonds of the vicious resorts," says the letter to the surety companies.

BOY HOLDS A CREW AT BAY.

Desperate Struggle on a Boat in Which He Uses a Knife.

Salvatore Farinia, 18 years old, a sailor aboard the lighter Henry Luckenback, now lying in Crane's shipyards, Erie Basin, Brooklyn, stabbed the Captain and first mate of the ship yesterday afternoon, after he had engaged in an altercation with another sailor on the boat. Farinia then held at bay the crew of fifty men, and when thrown to the deck had to be tied with ropes and held until the arrival of police from the Hamilton Avenue Station.

The Luckenback is at the dock undergoing repairs. The crew were putting the boat in ship-shape. Farinia and a companion were set to scrubbing the deck. The other sailor accused Farinia of "soldiering" at the work, and the two came to blows. With the rest of the crew, a motely band of all nationalities, looking on, they fought over the deck. Capt. James Dalton, hearing the fracas, ran towards the fighting sailors and separated them. He told them off to different parts of the boat, but Farinia refused to move. The Captain reached for a marlin spike, whereupon Farinia pulled out a six-inch bladed knife and cut the Captain slightly in the neck. The first mate, John Dalton, the Captain's brother, and the second mate, Sweeney, jumped in also. The first mate was cut badly in the abdomen. In the struggle that followed the Captain had his wrist scratched and the second mate was also slightly cut. The rest of the crew then overpowered Farinia and he was trussed up for the police.

A WAR OF UNDERTAKERS.

One, Alleging Contract for Cremation, Stops Rival's Burial of Crary.

GOSHEN, Ind., Aug. 23.—To enforce an alleged ante mortem contract for the cremation of Charles Crary, C. B. Silver, an undertaker, to-day met the funeral procession of Crary in the cemetery, and, with the aid of a lawyer and several policemen prevented the burial. The body was finally placed in a vault to await a legal decision. Silver contends that Crary, six years ago, entered into a contract with Silver to have his body cremated.

At Crary's death in Dallas, Tex., his uncle and heir, Wesley Crary, brought the body to Goshen and gave it into the charge of a rival undertaker, who to-day attempted to bury it according to to Wesley Crary's orders.

Crary's uncle alleges that his nephew was not mentally responsible when the contract with Silver for cremation was made.

SHOCK FOR NEW POLICEMAN.

McDonald, a Bachelor, Gets a Baby Outfit for His Station House Kit.

James Jay McDonald has just come out of the police training school. He was assigned to the East 126th Street Station on Sunday and still feels a little strange and new. These are McDonald's freshman days in the Police Department, and he is keeping his eye on the upper classmen.

As usual with new policemen, he went down to a Fourteenth Street department store and ordered his bedding. A big package arrived at the station yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock. There were a good many reserves in the back room. There is always a natural curiosity, even among men, to open and look at a package of new goods.

McDonald rushed to open his package. It contained a complete baby's outfit—stockings, tiny boots, a variegated assortment of bibs and tuckers and a lot of other baby articles, whose names McDonald didn't even know.

This property belonged to a woman in Simpson Street, the Bronx, it was afterward learned, and to her had gone McDonald's bedding, through a wrapper's mistake at the department store. McDonald is not married.

WANTS MECHANICS TAUGHT IN SCHOOLS

Labor's Educational Committee Urges the Adoption of Trade Instruction.

CONFERENCE IN OCTOBER

John Mitchell Says the Demand for the All-Around Machinist Is on the Increase.

An official report regarding the aims and objects of the Committee on Industrial Education of the American Federation of Labor, which held a two days' secret conference last week, was made yesterday by John Mitchell, Chairman of the committee.

The meeting was held at the Park Avenue Hotel, and it was decided yesterday to call a meeting for Oct. 22 and 23 in Washington, to which employers and experts in various lines of mechanical industry will be invited for the purpose of devising ways and means by which the principles of mechanics will be taught in the schools. The committee holds that the demand for the all-around mechanic is returning, owing to the difficulty employers experience in finding competent Superintendents who know every branch of a trade.

The committee consists of John Mitchell, Chairman; United States Labor Commissioner Charles P. Neill, Congressman W. B. Wilson, the Rev. Charles Stelzle, Chairman of the Department of Church and Labor of the Presbyterian Church; Charles H. Winslow, former Commissioner of Industrial Education, Massachusetts; Mrs. Raymond Robins, President National Women's Trades Union League; James Duncan, Vice President American Federation of Labor; John B. Lennon, Treasurer American Federation of Labor; Frank Duffy, Secretary United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners; Agnes Nestor, Secretary Glove Workers' International Union; John Golden, President United Textile Workers of America; James Wilson, President Patternmakers' League of North America; Edward Hirsch, President Maryland Federation of Labor; James Roach, Hugh Frayne, P. J. Conlin, and Stuart Reid.

The movement, it was stated, is not a trade union movement particularly, but is the first of the kind started by the American Federation of Labor. Chairman Mitchell says in his report:

"National associations for the promotion of industrial education have been started from time to time, but this is the first time the American Federation of Labor has gone into the matter. The committee has gone into the subject exhaustively, and finds that many manufacturers because of the specialization of the different departments of the trades find it very hard to get competent Superintendents owing to the difficulty of finding all-around mechanics who have learned everything about any particular trade.

"We will agitate for the teaching of the principles of mechanics in the public schools. The High Schools, for instance, teach pupils how to prepare for the professions, but as there are more people in mechanical trades than in the professions they should also, we believe, teach the principles of mechanics.

"A man, for instance, may know that a joint at a certain angle is stronger than at any other angle, without knowing the reason why. Another man will know why that joint is stronger. This man will be more valuable than the first man. Ambition to excell would be stimulated if mechanics had a better opportunity of knowing the principles of a trade, as well as learning one branch of a trade in a routine way. In the end this would be better for both employers and employes.

"A number of recommendations on the subject will be made at the coming meeting of the committee in Washington, which will be submitted at the next meeting of the American Federation of Labor for approval, before we ask for legislation on the subject."

HARRIMAN BETTER; DUE HOME TO-DAY

On Liner's Deck for First Time Since Sailing and Says He Is Feeling Fine.

ROADS' PLANS WAIT ON HIM

Declaration of Southern and Union Pacific Dividends the Only Action by Directors Until They Consult Him.

ON BOARD S. S. KAISER WILHELM II., By Wireless Via Halifax, N. S., Aug. 23.—After remaining in his suite practically all the time since leaving Cherbourg, on Aug. 18, E. H. Harriman appeared on deck this afternoon. He remained in the open air for half an hour and conversed with several of the passengers.

Mr. Harriman still looks greatly fatigued and in need of rest.

E. H. Harriman will reach New York this afternoon on board the North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm II. Mr. Harriman has been abroad for his health for the last two months and is returning home a fortnight earlier than he planned to do when he went away. On landing he will go immediately to his country place at Arden, Orange County, N. Y., to complete there the rest cure which has been prescribed for him by his physicians. The steamer was due to arrive here at about day-break, but has been delayed by fogs and it is not now expected to get to the pier until about 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Wireless messages received yesterday from the Kaiser Wilhelm II. told of Mr. Harriman's having benefitted by the sea voyage, even though he was confined to his quarters most of the trip owing to the heavy fogs which enveloped the liner. He was reported to have gone on deck yesterday for the first time since he left Cherbourg and his fellow passengers found him looking better than when he boarded the steamer.

Robert S. Lovett, Vice President and general counsel of the Union Pacific, received a wireless from Mr. Harriman yesterday morning in which he said he was feeling fine. In the dispatch Mr. Harriman said that he would see the newspaper men on the train on his way from Jersey City to Arden.

The cure which Mr. Harriman underwent at Bad Gastein caused him to lose flesh and left him much fatigued, but it is said to have improved his condition and the stay at Arden which he will begin this afternoon is expected by his physicians to prove just the sort of after-cure which Mr. Harriman needs.

While Mr. Harriman is speeding home this morning the Directors of the Union Pacific & Southern Pacific Railroads will meet at the Harriman offices at 120 Broadway. It has been rumored from time to time that at this meeting the rates of dividends on one or both of these stocks might be increased, but no such action was expected yesterday in the best informed quarters. So far as was expected by close associates of Mr. Harriman the Directors of the Union and Southern Pacific will declare both dividends at the regular rate and outside of this action will attend only to routine business.

Consideration of the Union Pacific plan of segregation and other important matters which Union Pacific interests have recently been discussing will be allowed to wait, it is understood, until further conferences regarding them have been had with Mr. Harriman.

HARRIMAN MISSED SPECIALIST.

London Report That Treatment Was Not What He Sought.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—On the eve of E. H. Harriman's arrival in New York I learn on excellent authority that the financier, by a curious mischance, failed to accomplish what was the chief object of his visit to Vienna, namely, to put himself under the care of a certain doctor recommended by his New York consulting physician, Dr. Frankel. Mr. Harriman is said to be suffering from stiffness of the vertebral column, a malady to which attention was first called in 1897 by Dr. Berthold Beer in Vienna and Prof. Struempell, then at Breslau.

Struempell declared this disease incurable, while Dr. Beer maintained the opposite, and instanced several cases of successful treatment. Dr. Beer further stated in a treatise published at the time that the complaint was by no means uncommon, but that it was not recognized owing to the fact that doctors and patients laid too much stress on the purely nervous symptoms, which were only a secondary consideration. Pietre Marie of Paris, in the following year, described two cases of the disease, which he called "spondylosis rhizomelique."

A majority of the authorities nowadays consider the malady incurable, but Dr. Beer is confident that his view is correct, and maintains that his method, while requiring great patience and perseverance on the part of both doctor and patient, is always productive of improvement.

Now, it was from Dr. Beer that his New York consultant recommended Mr. Harriman to seek treatment. When Mr. Harriman and Alexander Millar of the Union Pacific arrived in Vienna they made inquiries for Dr. Beer, pronouncing the name like the beverage made of hops. It happens that Dr. Beer's name is pronounced Bear, like the animal of the ursine species, and though Dr. Beer, pronounced Bear, is universally known in Vienna, nobody knew the Dr. Beer pronounced as written in English; that both Mr. Harriman and Mr. Millar assiduously inquired after. As a consequence Mr. Harriman put himself under the care of another physician whose well-known opinion is that the spinal malady from which Mr. Harriman suffers is incurable.

AUTO ON RAILS FOR HARRIMAN.

Will Take Him on Its Own Roadbed Into Basement of New Home.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Preparation for its owner's return were being made to-day at the new Summer home of E. H. Harriman at Arden, Orange County, on the summit of Tower Hill, the highest point in the Ramapo Mountain range. The home is not quite completed, but twelve rooms of the hundred in the house are ready for the family. E. T. Ford, Superintendent of the place, received word this afternoon that Mr. Harriman and the family would probably arrive at Arden about 6 o'clock to-morrow night.

The family will board the Harriman special car at Jersey City and go over the Erie to Arden. Mr. Harriman will be assisted from the car to an automobile which has been equipped with car wheels. This machine will take the family directly from the railroad station up the incline railroad on the mountain and pass directly into the basement of the mansion. The tracks run into the house through a tunnel under the broad front terrace of the grounds.

Mr. Harriman has not seen his home since early in the Spring, when it was only well started. Now the home is practically completed, with the exception of the few finishing touches which a week's time will supply. Out in the handsome garden is a swimming pool which was filled with water to-day and in which Mr. Harriman will take his daily bath. The 600 employes on the Harrman estate will greet their employer at the base of the mountain.

Dr. Lyle, who has been with Mr. Harriman in Vienna, will remain with him at the Summer home, occupying a room in the mansion adjoining Mr. Harriman's suite. Trained nurses from New York arrived to-day.

ARMY CUT CONFIRMED.

Adjutant General Says Reduction Will Be Made as Enlistments Expire.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Adjt. Gen. Ainsworth to-day definitely confirmed the report that an order had been issued by President Taft for the reduction of the normal strength of the army by 8,000 men. The publication of the executive order has caused something like a panic among army officers.

According to Gen. Ainsworth, the President's order calls for the reduction of the army rolls of all branches to 80,000 men by July 1, 1910. Under the plan that has reluctantly been mapped out in the War Department for carrying out this order, the limit will probably be reached much earlier than July. It is intended that reductions shall be horizontal in all branches, so that the present ratio between different branches of the service will be preserved as nearly as possible. The reductions in the army's fighting strength will be accomplished by the department availing itself of expirations of terms of enlistment and by curtailing somewhat the activities of the recruiting staff.

Not counting the Hospital Corps, which numbers about 4,000 men, the President's order will leave the fighting force of regulars available for emergencies in this country at about 70,000. Over 5,000 men included in the 80,000 limit are Philippine Scouts who have never been enrolled for service here.

As a matter of fact, army officials are having much trouble in keeping the force up to the limit allowed. This is due to the prosperity which has succeeded the panic of 1907, according to Gen. Ainsworth. Men who in time of stress willingly enlisted are, as fast as their terms expire, seeking employment in civil life, with the result that the recruiting service has had great difficulty in making up the defecit.

Special to The New York Times.

BEVERLY, Mass., Aug. 23.—The reduction of the army, it was explained here to-day, will be in the nature of keeping it where it is. While the full strength of the army, it was said, is 88,000, it numbers 80,000 at the present time, a force which the President and the Secretary of War deem efficient.

MAYOR STOY STANDS FIRM.

Atlantic City Official Won't Accept the Order for a "Dry" Town on Sunday.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 23.—The advocates of the observance of the Sunday laws, especially the clauses of the Bishops' act referring to liquor sales on that day, are disappointed over the failure of their crusade yesterday. The city was wide open, although it was thought the liquor sellers might make a pretense of obeying the law and perhaps satisfy the objectors.

Attorney General Wilson, to whom Gov. Fort referred the advocates of a closed Sunday for a means of making the officials do their duty last week, said he would servie notice on the officials to enforce the laws. Failure to obey this notice for ten days is a misdemeanor. To-day Mr. Wilson drew the order and gave it to the officers of the Sabbath League for them to serve.

Mayor Stoy refused to officially receive the order. However, it is asserted that the service is complete, and if the law is not enforced the Mayor is liable to arrest. The Mayor refused to-night to discuss his stand. He simply refuses to accept service, and stands pat. The reformers say they will send the Mayor to jail. The political backers of the Mayor say they will back him up to the limit.

MIMIC WAR SOLDIERS BACK.

Sore-Foot Brigade Sail Home with Artillerymen—Denial of Poor Food.

The United States Army transport Kilpatrick, having on board six companies of regular coast artillery, which took part in the mimic war in Massachusetts last week, arrived from New Bedford yesterday afternoon. There were also on board nine soldiers of the Fourteenth Regiment of Brooklyn, who came down the gangplank with their feet swathed in bandages. They were members of the sore-foot battalion, whose sufferings were recounted last week.

One of the regular officers who came in on the Kilpatrick denied that unwholesome food had been served to the Red Army during the manoeuvres.

"The real trouble was," said he, "that many of the guardsmen had been used to having their food served in dainty fashion at their city homes, and they did not like the change to field conditions. There was plenty of food in camp, and while it was plain it was wholesome."

DID NOT AVOID SUMMONS.

Protesting Attachment, Stock Operator Says He Was on Vacation.

John Grossberg, a stock operator, applied to Supreme Court Justice Giegerich yesterday to have set aside an attachment against him for $37,372 obtained by the stock brokerage firm of Stiebel, Hernsheim & Co., 60 Exchange Place, on the statement that Grossberg had left the city to avoid the service of a summons in the suit. Decision was reserved.

Counsel for Grossberg denounced the action of the plaintiff firm, stating that his client, "after returning from a six weeks' vacation, found himself practically branded as an absconder." He said that the amount involved was based upon a note on which for more than two years the brokers never sued, and it was only a few days before Grossberg sailed abroad that he was visited by the firm's attorneys, who admit that even then one of them had a summons in his pocket but did not serve it. He said that Grossberg announced that he probably should take a vacation.

Counsel for the brokers said that Grossberg had given no intimation that he was to leave the city, and it was not until his name appeared among the recorded visitors in Paris that they knew he was away. away.

TWO BOYS SAVED IN BAY.

Police Launch Rescues Lads Whose Rowboat Had Capsized.

Louis Ferdinando, 17 years old, of 138 Dyckman Street, and Joe Mulcahy, 17, of 72 Wolcott Street, Brooklyn, started out in a rowboat about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon down the bay. About a half mile west of the Thirty-ninth Street ferry, Brooklyn, they were passed by the ferryboat Manhattan. Unconscious of the danger they permitted their small boat to drift parallel to the waves caused by the passing boat, and before they knew how it happened their boat capsized.

The boys clung to the upturned boat until Police Launch 5, commanded by Sergt. Dobert of Harbor Squad A, which was in the neighborhood at the time of the accident, came to their rescue.

The boys were pulled into the launch and the capsized boat was taken in tow and landed near the Thirty-ninth Street ferry, Brooklyn.

Beyond the scare and the wet clothing the boys escaped unhurt.

SUBWAY ROWDIES GO TO THE ISLAND

Twenty-eight Sunday Train Offenders Taken There to Serve Sentences.

HARD LABOR THEIR PORTION

Twenty-nine Others, One a Girl, Arraigned in the Children's Court for Punishment.

There were twenty-eight young hoodlums on an East River ferryboat yesterday morning, but they indulged in none of their usual merry pranks—didn't smash the hat of a single fellow-passenger, formed no flying wedges, jostled and insulted no one. Whatever "rough house" joys they may have had were entirely reminiscent. For they were on a ferryboat whose ironclad rules do not permit "boys to be boys." They were passengers on the Minnahannock, that plies between the Charities Department dock, foot of East Twenty-sixth Street, and the workhouse on Blackwell's Island.

They were twenty-eight of the hundred or more hoodlums scooped up by the police in their wholesale raid Sunday afternoon and evening on rowdyism in the Subway and elevated trains. Some were ticketed for five-days, some for a ten-day stay in the custody of Warden Fox.

They were a sad and dejected lot of youths. The experiences they had already been through had subdued their ebullient young spirits. After having waited their turn in the long line of similar offenders, who were arraigned in the Night Court, and having had sentences passed upon them by Magistrate Krotel, they had spent the night and early morning in the cramped and overcrowded cells of the Jefferson Market Police Court.

Then they had had a ride in the prison van to the pier at the foot of East Twenty-sixth Street. Here there was another long and cheerless wait, penned in a small room with nothing to sleep on but hard benches. But even these were so crowded that they had no chance to stretch out and those who succeeded in stealing naps were obliged to do it sitting up.

At 10:30 they boarded the Minnahannock with the other prisoners bound for Blackwell's Island. Some few tried to keep their courage up by attempting a few jokes, but weak as the effort was, it was quickly dampened by a terse, "Hey, cut that out, young fellow, that don't go here," from one of the keepers.

The boat arrived at the Workhouse wharf at 11 o'clock. There the boys were marched two by two to the little yellow wicket at the south end of the building. Inside they were lined up and, one by one, their pedigrees taken.

One of the officials afterward said to a TIMES reporter that many of the boys had a hard time to keep themselves in hand during this ordeal.

Not All Bad Boys.

"They weren't all bad boys," said this official, "by a good deal. I would say that more than half of them looked as though they had come from decent homes. Why, some of them were even in knickerbockers, but as they had said they were over 16, of course, they had to take the same medicine that was handed out to the bigger boys. The rest of the youngsters looked like a pretty hard lot. They gave their pedigrees in the off-hand way that an old-timer would, but you could see that a good many of the others had all they could do to keep from crying."

As each boy's pedigree was taken he was passed on to another room, where his clothes were taken from him and he underwent the prison bath. Then he got his striped workhouse suit and again lined up. Before all the pedigrees had been taken the 12 o'clock whistles had blown, and the youngsters got their first taste of prison fare. The menu for yesterday's dinner was soup, hash, two slices of bread, and a cup of coffee. This was served in tin plates. The only eating utensil given to the inmates of the workhouse is a spoon.

The entire afternoon was taken up in completing the work of getting the boys' pedigrees. Four o'clock is the supper hour in the workhouse. This is a simple meal, the invariable menu being two slices of bread and a cup of coffee. At 4:30 the boys were sent to their cells. These cells are about 8 by 12, and have four canvas beds arranged in two tiers. A rough blanket is the only bedclothing.

Four thirty is the regular hour for locking all the inmates in their cells. From this hour on the cellmates may talk or read the newspapers or books. No games are allowed. At 9 o'clock all lights are extinguished, and from then on absolutely no talking is allowed.

At 6 o'clock this morning they will be awakened and marched to the bathroom, where each prisoner is compelled to take a daily shower. At 7 they have breakfast. This consists of coffee, bread, and sometimes hash, sometimes jelly, sometimes oatmeal. At 8 they go to work.

Warden Fox, in talking to a TIMES reporter yesterday afternoon, said that he was greatly puzzled to know just what to put the boys at work on. He said:

"As a rule, young prisoners sent to the workhouse are sent by me to Randall's Island, where there is a reformatory, but since these boys are only here on five and ten day terms, it would consume too much time in sending them there and bringing them back.

Problem for the Prison.

"This leaves me with the problem of discovering an occupation for them during that short time. I don't want to put them in with the older men, because many of these boys are evidently unused to life of this kind or the companionship that they would be thrown in with. I am going on the principle that all these boys are first offenders.

"This does not mean that they will not have to perform hard labor while here. What I think I'll do is to make them into a separate squad and put them at work either in the vegetable garden or at work repairing roads."

Twenty-nine youngsters, one of them a girl, who were arrested on Sunday in the Subway and elevated railway cars for rowdyism, were arraigned yesterday morning before Justice Mayo in the Children's Court. All of them were either fined or remanded to the care of the Children's Society to be dealt with later.

The girl was Julia Bleha, 15 years old, of 1,428 First Avenue. On Sunday evening she went with her sister, Carolina, to North Beach, and was returning on the Bowery Bay Ferry about 8:30 o'clock. She was in the company of William Farrell. The party went into the men's cabin and were amusing themselves by snatching off the hats of the passengers.

According to Policeman Egan of the Traffic Squad, who finally made the arrests, the girl snatched a cigarette from the lips of Farrell, and then both the man and girl began a chase from one end of the ferryboat to the other, bumping into passengers and screaming at the top of their voices. The girl was fined $2, which was paid by her father. Farrell was arraigned on Sunday night in the Night Court and sent to the workhouse.

Six youths arrested at the Long Island Ferry house at the foot of Thirty-fourth Street Sunday night, and the last of the aggregation brought before Magistrate Krotel in the Night Court, were fined $5 each by the Magistrate last night. Because of the press of prisoners on Sunday night, the six youths had to await their hearing till last night. The charge against them was disorderly conduct at the ferry.

Loving Cup for Daizell.

When Fred B. Daizell, head of the Daizell Towing Company, got to his office, 70 South Street, yesterday morning, he found most of his employes awaiting him. Before recovering from his surprise they had presented to him a big loving cup. After that there was speechmaking, during which the cup, filled to the brim, was kept passing around. It was presented as a token on the thirtieth anniversary of his business beginning.

WOMAN CATCHES RATTLER.

Mrs. Kimble Bravely Trapped Reptile with a Milk Pail and a String.

Special to The New York Times.

MILLBROOK, N. J., Aug. 23.—Mrs. Lydia Kimble of this place was out berrying in the meadows a mile from her home yesterday when she encountered a huge rattler with ten rattles.

Mrs. Kimble was just reaching out over some low branches for a cluster of huckleberries when she heard a whirring noise on her left. She glanced around and saw the rattlesnake, coiled and ready to strike.

Without altering her position, Mrs. Kimble deftly turned the large milk pail she carried upside down and dropped it over the reptile. She then fashioned a noose out of a piece of twine she carried with her. Lifting the edge of the pail, she coolly waited for the snake to dart out its head.

When it did she dropped the noose over the protruding head, and, with a quick jerk, swung the long, squirming body from her. As Mrs. Kimble was after berries first and snakes second, she hung her prize to the branch of a near-by tree and continued picking berries. When she had finished she returned for the reptile and brought it home.

NO FUSION ACTION YET.

Committee of One Hundred Thinks Time Inopportune for Announcements.

The Committee on Candidates of the Committee of One Hundred met yesterday afternoon. The meeting lasted two hours. One of the members said after an adjournment had been taken that the ground had been gone over pretty thoroughly, but that a majority of the members agreed that the time was not opportune for announcing any definite action looking to fusion or the ultimate overthrow of Tammany Hall. The committee will meet again on Wednesday evening.

A meeting of several small fry organizations of anti-Tammany tendency had been called for last night at the Hotel Astor. The meeting, which was to have been a "fusion conference," was postponed indefinitely, however. According to one of the prospective conferees this was in deference to the earnest solicitation of Republican County Chairman Herbert Parsons, who was anxious that Republican State Chairman Timothy L. Woodruff and he should have an opportunity to talk over candidates, so as to be prepared for united action when they enter the fusion conferences.

A representative of one of the organizations said there would be a conference on Thursday night, when the call for a meeting of all anti-Tammany bodies would surely go out.

CLIMBS MAST FOR PRISONER.

Policeman Clubs Sailor on Crosstrees Who Shot Shipmate.

Alexander Larson, mate, and James Stoddart, a sailor, were alone on the deck of the schooner Palmetto, from Clark's Harbor, Canada, anchored at the foot of Oakwood Street, in Newtown Creek, Williamsburg, last night. A crowd of small boys were calling the mate "Swede." Stoddart, who is only 17 years old, encouraged them to keep jibing at the mate, it was said, and on that account Larson struck him.

Rushing into the cabin, Stoddart grabbed up a gun and came back and discharged one barrel at Larson. His right arm was torn to pieces, and he fell to the deck. The sound of the shooting attracted Policeman Karney of the Greenpoint Station, who came down the pier on the run.

Stoddart ran up to the crosstree of the second mast, carrying the gun with him. Karney told him to come down. Stoddart answered that he wouldn't, and that if the policeman started to climb up the mast he would shoot him. Nevertheless Karney did climb the mast to the crosstree, clubbed the boy soundly, and then brought him down.

He was locked up in the Greenpoint Station, charged with felonious assault, and Larson was removed to the Eastern District Hospital, where it was said that he had lost so much blood that he would probably die.

MAY USE BINNS'S PICTURE.

Republic's Wireless Operator Loses Suit Against Vitagraph Concern.

Supreme Court Justice Lehman denied yesterday the application of counsel for "Jack" Binns, the wireless operator of the steamer Republic that was rammed by the Florida last Spring, for an injunction restraining the Vitagraph Company of America from using a series of moving pictures alleged to be of the disaster and showing a picture said to be that of the plaintiff. Binns also wanted the films turned over to him.

The court said that apparently there was little demand at present for the films containing the plaintiff's alleged picture, and "practically all injury which the plaintiff suffers from the use of his picture and name has passed."

INCENDIARY FIRES TENEMENT.

Policeman Gets All the Tenants Out—Black Hand Threats.

When Policeman Petty discovered a well-developed fire in the store on the ground floor of the five-story tenement house at 502 First Avenue early yesterday morning all the tenants were sound asleep. Running through the house he banged on all the doors with his club, shouting that the house was on fire.

Most of the tenants got out, but some thirty of them found themselves on the fire escapes when the flames rushed out of the front of the building and cut off their escape down that way. They clung to the fire escapes until the firemen drowned out the fire. The damage was $1,000.

The fire was believed to be incendiary. Some of the tenants have received threatening blackmailing letters, and this is the house in which lived Antonio Parisco, who was murdered two years ago, supposedly by Black Hand agents.

WHAT MADE YOU DEAF?

Did you ever take a big dose of quinine and then notice how, after a short time, you had become quite deaf and your ears would ring and buzz? Quinine in big doses is a poison which enters the blood and attacks the ear nerves. When the ear nerves are poisoned there are ringing and roaring noises in the ear and deafness.

Professor Politzer of Vienna, the great ear specialist, said that the ear nerves were usually the first part of the body to point out poisonous substances circulating with the blood.

Head noises are the signs given us by nature to point out the fact that our blood contains poison. Head noises also point out the fact that there is a disturbance at work in the ear which, if not corrected, will destroy the hearing.

We have learned to-day how disease breeding poisons are created. We know that germs in the act of living throw off poisons from their bodies.

Take catarrh, for an example. Here the germs attack the membranes that line the nose and throat. These germs do not enter the blood, but they throw off a poison, which is absorbed into the blood. This accounts for the dull, tired feeling, the backache, the headache and pains through the limbs that go with a cold, an attack of grippe and catarrh.

The catarrh poisons attack the ear nerves and cause the head noises and deafness that are so often met with in catarrh sufferers.

I have made a discovery in the treatment of head noises and deafness which I consider an important one. My discovery does away with the necessity of passing instruments into the ear tubes, which measures have proved unsatisfactory, are painful, and instead of curing the disease have often forced it further up into the ear tubes.

I know that if deafness is taken in time and the blood is freed of those poisonous substances which irritate the ear nerves the head noises will usually disappear and the hearing will improve. I know further that even later in the disease, where the head noises and deafness have been present for several years, once the system is freed of the poisons which cause the trouble the hearing will be improved.

Amongst the first cases upon whom my new method of treating head noises and deafness was tested was Mr. August Kolkemeyer, who consulted me in my Chicago office in November, 1907. At that time he told me that fifteen years before he began to lose his hearing, at which time he had moved out into Nebraska, and then he noticed that there were noises in his head all the time. At first, he told me, the noises sounded like escaping steam. In the beginning the noises would come and go. They would be present for a day or two and then disappear for a few days. About two years after he began to suffer from head noises these unnatural sounds were present in the ears all the time. He said that his left ear got so bad that he could hear only loud conversation. The noises in his ears finally got so bad that they interfered with his sleeping. With his left ear he was not able to hear his watch tick for two years.

After treating Mr. Kolkemeyer for a couple of months he said:

"My head noises are now all gone, and I can hear my watch tick clear across the room."

Within the past few days Mr. Kolkemeyer visited my Chicago office for advice concerning some little stomach trouble that he was suffering from, and he reported that he had no trouble with his hearing since he was treated, and that he could hear better than he ever expected to when he first consulted me, and that the head noises have entirely disappeared.

Mr. Kolkemeyer is over sixty years of age and resides at 3,135 South Halstead Street, Chicago. His case is cited to show what can be done by my new method in a great many cases of deafness in those whose ears have been neglected a long time, and even in people who are advanced in years.

Here is who I am and what I have done: I graduated in medicine in New York in 1879. I was the prize winner of my class. I won in competitive examination the position of Physician to Bellevue Hospital, where I served in 1879 and 1880.

I have made a specialty of diseases of the throat and ear for thirty years. I decided the best way I could tell the people who I was and what I had done was to advertise in the daily papers.

The following interview with Professor Loomis will explain what he thought of me:

(N. Y. World, Sept. 2, 1894.)

"Professor Loomis of the University of New York, the great specialist, said in alluding to medical men who advertise: 'Dr. McCoy, for instance, is an able man, well educated, a thorough scientist, and a first-class physician. He is a graduate of Bellevue Hospital. He advertises, does an immense business, and is doing much good.'"

If you think my training and experience should make me a good ear doctor, I should be pleased to have you visit my offices. It will cost you nothing for an examination and advice. If your ears have been so neglected that treatment will not restore your hearing, I have the best instrument ever invented to make deaf people hear. It is called the Baker Microphone. I will be pleased to give you an opportunity to test this little device free.

ASK BAKER TO VETO BINGHAM'S ORDERS

Police Make Concerted Petition That So-Called "Anti-Graft" Rules Be Rescinded

ON EVE OF THE CAMPAIGN

Some See a Threat to Politicians in the Action—Rank and File Demand Three-Platoon System.

A petition signed by the Presidents of the four benevolent associations representing that number of grades in the New York police force, namely, Lieutenants, Sergeants, patrolmen, and doormen, praying for the rescinding of certain rules made by Gen. Bingham when Police Commissioner, and which, he held, were indispensable in freeing the force from "the system," was presented to Police Commissioner Baker yesterday, who promised to give it his consideration.

Although the petition bore only the four signatures mentioned, it is practically certain that it was signed by them for and on behalf of all their members, comprising almost the whole police force. It is the first time that an organized effort by all grades has been made to attain their ends, and there are many who believe that the time of the approaching election has been seized upon as an opportunity for the force to show its strength.

First the Lieutenants, through Lieut. R. E. Enright, President of the Lieutenants' Benevolent Association, ask that their present shield be changed to gold or heavy plate, "in keeping with their expensive uniforms and the dignity of the rank," and also that the identifying numbers on the shields be eliminated. Further they want the rule requiring them to ring up their station hourly, while on patrol, rescinded, as among other reasons they give this that it is "humiliating" to them.

They also ask for the abrogation of the rule forbidding them to levy assessments on members of the force for any purpose whatever, except by permission of the Police Commissioner, and forbidding them to make presents, "collect or receive money, or anything else from citizens or others, or sell tickets for any purpose."

When Gen. Bingham made these rules, he said they would tend to do away with graft. His words were: "It will put the quietus on presenting high officials with costly presents on their birthdays, or on their wives' birthdays, or for that matter, on any occasion."

The Sergeants, through Sergt. John T. Nilon, President of the Sergeants' Benevolent Association, ask the Commissioner to rescind the regulation requiring them to sleep in the dormitories with patrolmen. "It disturbs their rest and repose," the petition says, and also interferes with discipline.

The patrolmen, through Patrolman Peter McEntee, President of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, ask for the re-establishment of the three-platoon system, which they say has "twice been granted and twice revoked for no good or logical reason."

The doormen, through Doorman George F. Dorsch, President of the Doormen's Benevolent Association, ask for leave for one hour for meals when on night duty.

DENY PURSUIT OF REYES.

Report That Diaz's Troops Have Marched to Arrest Him Ridiculed.

LAREDO, Texas, Aug. 23.—Following upon a report that troops of cavalry had left Monterey, Saltillo, and Montemorelos to-day for Galeana, where Gen. Bernardo Reyes, Governor of Nuevo Leon, is in hiding, and that the General's arrest was probable, comes from a reliable source in Monterey the denial that there has been any concerted movement of Federal troops looking to the arrest of Reyes. It is also stated that Gen. Reyes is still visiting in the neighborhood of Galeana and that no endeavor on the part of the Federal authorities has been made in any way concerning him.

There has been no movement recently of troops from Monterey or Montemorelos toward Galeana, it is added, and no troops to-day traversed either of the railroad lines leading from those cities to Galeana.

The source from which this information comes ridicules the story that Federal troops are endeavoring to bring about the arrest of Reyes, and points out that such action would only result in a state of affairs that has thus far been avoided.

Gen. Reyes is quietly waiting near Galeana, and is taking no active part in the political efforts of the Reyistas to bring about his candidacy for the office of Vice President. But so popular is the General with his party that it is feared that any effort on the part of the Federal Government to arrest him would incite his partisans to riot and bloodshed.

MRS. N. W. ANTHONY HURT.

Wife of Coal Co.'s President and Her Friend Pinned Under an Auto.

Special to The New York Times.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Aug. 23.—While attempting to pass a wagon on the Oceanport Road near the Monmouth Park race track shortly after 6 o'clock to-night, a car owned by Nicholas W. Anthony, President of the North American Coal Company of 17 Battery Place, Manhattan, with a Summer home at Allenhurst, was wrecked and two women hurt.

Mrs. Anthony, wife of the owner of the car, had her left arm broken in two places, while her guest, a Mrs. Adams, also of New York, was cut about the face.

The party had been to Red Bank and were en route for Allenhurst when the accident happened. There was a soft spot in the road where the chauffeur attempted to turn out. Instantly the machine was in the ditch, overturned. The two women were pinned under the wreck. The chauffeur and coachman on the front seat were unhurt. The injured women were removed to Oceanport, where Dr. E. W. Crater attended them. Later they were sent home in a motor car.

HELD AS EXPRESS ROBBER.

Messenger Charged with Dropping $3,000 from Train, to Get It Later.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Aug. 23.—George P. Turner, a messenger for the Southern Express Company, was arrested at Salisbury yesterday charged with the robbery of money from a car in transit. Turner's run was between Salisbury and Asheville, and it is alleged that several days ago he dropped a sack containing something like $3,000 from the car as the train neared Salisbury. He is alleged to have returned to the spot, secured the money, and gone to South Carolina.

He returned to Salisbury yesterday and was immediately arrested.

PREDICTS PEACE IN CUBA.

Minister Velez Says Era of Tranquil Prosperity Is Ahead.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—The union of the Zayaists and Miguelists, the two factions of the Cuban liberal party, into the new born national liberal party as described in Havana dispatches this morning is the beginning of an era of tranquil prosperity in the island, according to Carlos Garcia Velez, Cuban Minister to the United States, who has just returned from a visit to the President at Beverly.

Stories of a third intervention by the United States into the domestic affairs of the island the diplomat pronounced as absurd and unfounded. "This Government regards with pleased interest our manner of managing our own affairs," said Señor Velez. "We are doing the best we know how to build up a Government and a country such as the United States would like us to have. There is no excuse for the stories that I have mentioned, which it would seem are circulated with clearly malicious intent. They are baseless and tend to create bad feeling. President Gomez has the Government well in hand and has the support of the people. Of course there is an opposition party, as there should be in every well-regulated republic.

"I hope to bring about an even better understanding between the Americans and the Cubans. They should study each other. There are great opportunities for the enhancement of the commercial relations between the two countries which it is also part of my mission here to bring about. Cuba expects the next tobacco and sugar crops to be about the largest she has had. The financial condition of the country is good, and there can be no reason why money should not be forthcoming for the crops, especially when there could not be offered better security for the money than is offered in Cuba."

Mr. Velez said there is no possibility of an insurrection breaking out in the island that could justify American intervention. The commercial bonds between the new republic and this country, he said, are becoming closer and closer each year, and that, in his opinion, is the extent of future interference by one country with the other.

JAPAN-CHINA AGREEMENT.

Former Will Not Hurry Building of Antung-Mukden Line.

PEKING, Aug. 23.—M. Ijuin, the Japanese Minister to China, has handed to the diplomatic representatives of the interested powers copies of the agreement regarding the Antung-Mukden Railroad signed at Mukden between China and Japan Aug. 19. This memorandum separates the commercial questions connected with the railroad from the political aspects of the case, and it is understood that Japan, in framing it, strove to eliminate anything that would offend Chinese susceptibilities.

To this end it is understood here that Japan will hold the reconstruction of the line in temporary abeyance, possibly until late in the period of two years allowed for rebuilding. In the meantime it is hoped that the political questions will be settled.

GAS EXPLOSION KILLS FIVE.

Twelve More Injured in Accident at Lighting Plant in Geneva, Switzerland.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Aug. 23.—Five persons were killed and twelve dangerously injured by an explosion at the city gas works to-day. The explosion occurred in the purifying chamber, between the two principal gasometers. A large number of doctors answered the call to attend the wounded, who later were conveyed to the City Hospital in ambulances.

Thousands of spectators, attracted by the explosion and the report that many people had been killed, crowded around the works, necessitating the closing of places of business near the scene of the disaster.

Advance with Machine Guns on Rebels Who Refuse to Yield.

BERLIN, Aug. 23.—A dispatch from Uskub, European Turkey, to the Kölnische Zeitung says that the Albanians in the revolutionary movement against the Turkish Ministry have refused to enter into negotiations looking to peace.

Orders, therefore, were issued at 10 o'clock this morning for an advance by Turkish troops from the station at Verissowich to clear the adjacent country of Albanians with rapid-firers. The advance was carried out, but the losses are unknown. Railway traffic has been suspended.

KREMENTCHUG, Russia, Aug. 23.—A thousand families in this district have been rendered homeless by a fire that started yesterday in a local lumber mill and raged throughout the night. CITIZENS' UNION GETS AFTER BAKER

Advises Him of Excise Violation in Saloon of Tammany Leader McGuire.

SAY THE POLICE PERMIT IT

Committee Tells of Finding Lieut. McAuliffe in Saloon's Rear Room on Sunday Night.

The Citizens' Union has gone on the trail of Police Commissioner Baker and, incidentally, Eugene J. McGuire, Tammany leader of the Thirty-second Assembly District in the Bronx, who sometimes has been mentioned as a possible successor to Borough President Haffen of the Bronx, and at other times as a possible candidate for Sheriff on the Tammany ticket.

Mr. McGuire conducts a saloon at the corner of 138th Street and Third Avenue. This is very close to the Alexander Avenue Police Station. Secretary Robert S. Binkerd of the Citizens' Union declares that since Commissioner Bingham was superseded by Commissioner Baker there has not been the slightest endeavor on the part of Mr. McGuire to observe the Sunday law or of the police to enforce it.

Sunday night four members of the Citizens' Union Central Committee of the Bronx, accompanied by Secretary Binkerd, visited the saloon. In a communication sent to Commissioner Baker Mr. Binkerd thus describes what they saw:

At 8:40 P. M. last Sunday four members of the Bronx Central Committee of the Citizens' Union and myself entered the saloon and went to the bar, where there were already a half dozen men being served with drinks. While we were there, a man came in with two children, not above 5 years of age, and was served with a drink, while the children sat in the barroom with him.

In the rear room of the saloon, seated so that he could look in and see this open violation of the law, was Lieut. Timothy McAuliffe, of the Alexander Avenue Station. Two of the committee returned at 9:20, and Mr. McAuliffe was still there. A few minutes later he left, saying to his friends that he had to go on at 12 o'clock, which, by consultation with the blotter, you will find to be a fact.

We would like to believe that you are sincere in your statement that the law will be enforced by you as it was by your predecessor. Does this look it?

You are doubtless familiar with the fact that Mr. McGuire is the Tammany Hall leader of the Thirty-second Assembly District.

Commissioner Baker paid a visit to the office of District Attorney Jerome after he had received the letter. He spent some time with the District Attorney, but said his visit had no particular significance. Assistant District Attorney Murphy was present at the conference.

In commenting on the communication received from the Citizens' Union the Commissioner said that he had ordered an investigation of the complaint.

"Any honest complaint, whether it be made by an organization like the Citizens' Union or by a private citizen, will receive full consideration at my hands," he declared.

At McGuire's saloon it was said last night that earlier in the evening Mr. McGuire had read in a newspaper the letter of Secretary Binkerd, and that he had left the saloon and not returned there since.

At the Alexander Avenue police station, a block away, Lieut. McAuliffe was asked what he had to say in reference to the statement regarding himself in Mr. Binkerd's letter to Commissioner Baker.

"I have nothing to say for the present," was his reply.

McAuliffe and McGuire are said to be very good friends. It was recalled yesterday that it was at McGuire's district picnic two years ago that Lieut. McAuliffe, then a Sergeant, had a falling out with Detective Wasserman, then attached to the District Attorney's office.

The quarrel ended disastrously for Wasserman, for McAuliffe was a much bigger man. Later, when the Sergeant was taken downtown by Bingham to become part of the latter's secret service staff, Wasserman was placed on trial for irregularities in the service.

BAKER VISITS JEROME.

Says Everything Is Running Smoothly Between Police and District Attorney.

Police Commissioner Baker spent a half hour in the District Attorney's office yesterday in conference with Mr. Jerome and Assistant District Attorney Murphy. On leaving Mr. Baker was reminded of his call of several weeks ago, when he said he hoped for better co-operation between the two departments.

"Yes, I remember it," he replied, "and am happy to say that everything has been running very smoothly."

Mr. Murphy said that at present he could not discuss the nature of the Commissioner's call, adding that he might have something to say about it on Thursday.

FIND MRS. KOPETZ IN ASYLUM.

Well-to-Do Bronx Woman Disappeared Three Weeks Ago.

Deserted by all her friends, Mrs. Marguerite Weber Zorn Kopetz, a well-to-do elderly woman of this city, after wandering dazed from one up-State town to another for a week, is now an inmate of the Middletown State Hospital for the Insane. She was found penniless and exhausted in the streets of Newburg three weeks ago; but, when taken at that time to the Middleown institution her mind was so confused that she could only say she was Margaret Zorn, a name which she ceased to bear for ten years.

Last Friday at the hospital she came to herself sufficiently to be able to tell the officials what her real name was, and where her only remaining friend could be located. Last Saturday William B. Royce, counsel for the hospital, called on the woman's friend in this city and is now trying to find Mrs. Kopetz's husband and half brother. Special County Judge H. B. Royce of Middletown has meantime been appointed by the Orange County courts to take care of Mrs. Kopetz's property.

Mrs. Kopetz's only remaining friend seems to be Therese Krupholder, who has a millinery establishment at the corner of Lexington Avenue and Fifty-third Street. She gave this account of her friend when seen last night:

"Mrs. Kopetz owns a $10,000 house at 210 East 178th Street, the Bronx, and has an account of $800 in the Hoboken Savings Bank. The house is occupied by the families of a policeman and an employee of the Fire Department. She may also own property that I do not know about. She was formerly Marguerite Weber, a milliner in Wiesbaden.

"After making considerable money, she married a man named Zorn. He died and she came to this country, bought the house in 178th Street, and married Alfred Kopetz. A year ago she had the delusion that her husband and half brother, Christopher Weber, wanted to kill her for her money. They left home on this account and all her friends fell away.

"I kept her in my home for a time, but her delusions frightened my customers. One night I had to call in the police. Soon after that she moved to a flat at 50 West Sixty-fifth Street, where she lived alone for about two months. Then she disappeared."

At the apartment house it was said last night that Mrs. Kopetz disappeared from the flat on July 21.

Lawyer Royce says she underwent an operation after being received in the hospital at Middletown, but she may ultimately recover her reason.

M., making the trip up the Hudson and returning at 4 o'clock, arriving on the return trip at about 6:30.

COLLEGE COWS HAVE ANTHRAX

Precautions Taken at University of Wisconsin to Prevent Disease's Spread

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 23.—An outbreak of anthrax in the dairy herd at the farm of the University of Wisconsin developed last week. The authorities of the College of Agriculture have taken every precaution to check the disease and to prevent its further spread.

The death of a cow in a pasture aroused suspicion. The sale of milk was discontinued and the dairy herd was placed under strict surveillance. A quarantine was established and an isolated stable provided to which all cows that showed abnormal temperatures were taken.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—While without special information concerning the outbreak of anthrax in the dairy herd of the University of Wisconsin, the Department of Agriculture does not regard the incident as involving any danger of a spread of the disease. The methods that have been devised for controlling the spread of anthrax have gotten it so well under control wherever it has been developed that its serious spread is not feared.

No report has been received of the presence of anthrax at the Government experimental farms.

HUGHES TO MAKE SPEECHES.

SARANAC INN, Aug. 23.—Gov. Hughes will leave Rustic Cabin, his Summer place here, on Wednesday morning for a brief speech-making tour. On Wednesday he will attend the Oswego County Fair at Sandy Creek, and in the evening will address a mass meeting at Syracuse on the subject of the direct primary.

Later in the week the Governor will speak in Summit Park and Utica, and at the International Y. M. C. A. convention at Silver Bay, Lake George.

STARVING, FELL INTO RIVER.

O'Hanlon Dropped Off Pier and Rescuer Had Hard Time Saving Him.

Alexander O'Hanlon, 43 years old, who said later that he had no home and was suffering for lack of food, fell off the pier at the foot of East 136th Street yesterday afternoon. Peter Gillen of 6 West 138th Street, who had seen O'Hanlon fall, jumped into the river after him. Having laid hold of the now unconscious man Gillen swam back to the pier.

He found that he could not raise himself and O'Hanlon up on it. There was then no one in sight to whom to call for aid. He swam about for twenty or thirty minutes, holding up O'Hanlon and calling out loudly. After a while Policeman Brenneke of the Alexander Avenue Station ran down to the pier, threw a rope out to him and pulled them both to safety.

O'Hanlon was sent to Lincoln Hospital to be treated for submersion. He will recover.

TALK OF A SHAKE-UP IN HOUSE OF REFUGE

Supt. Byers to Take Up Matter of Cruelty Charges Upon His Return This Week.

HUGHES COMMITTEE REPORT

Inmate's Charges Sustained in Some Particulars, but Byer's Friends Say He Can Explain All.

The report yesterday that a shake-up may follow the report of the committee appointed by Gov. Hughes to investigate charges of cruelty in the disciplining of inmates of the House of Refuge, on Randall's Island, occasioned a lot of talk in prison circles yesterday.

It is understood that when Supt. Joseph P. Byers of the House of Refuge returns this week a statement regarding the manner in which the institution is conducted will be made. Mr. Byers is on his way home from attendance at the National convention of the American Prison Association in Seattle. J. Hampden Robb, President of the Board of Managers of the House of Refuge, was out of the city yesterday also. These two officials, it was said, are the only ones qualified to talk of conditions in the institution.

The charges of cruelty followed the sending of a letter to Gov. Hughes by an inmate of the House of Refuge. The committee of investigation, composed of Dr. Stephen Smith of this city, Joseph C. Baldwin, Jr., of Mount Kisco, and Dennis McCarthy of Syracuse, upheld the charge of cruelty in certain particulars, among them the sending of inmates to the disciplinary division for trivial offenses; depriving them of opportunities for exercise; depriving them of the admonitions of the Church; requiring them to stand with backs to the walls for long periods, and slapping the faces of inmates by punitive officers.

Friends of Supt. Byers declare that he will be able to explain satisfactorily all the charges of alleged cruelties. Every person connected with the institution speaks in the highest praise of the Superintendent, who, they say, has made many changes that have improved conditions.

Under Mr. Byers the parole system now in vogue at the institution has been perfected, and hundreds of young boys have been returned to society under parole, and in a large percentage of cases they have led honest lives. One of the best schools in the city, friends of the institution declare, is conducted at the House of Refuge. Among the winners of NEW YORK TIMES Lincoln prizes last year were nineteen scholars from the Refuge School.

Talks on Teeth

By G. GORDON MARTIN
(Incorporated)

Free Book About Teeth

We can only outline the story of the Martinolar Method in these short talks.

The whole story is told in detail in our handsomely illustrated book of 40 pages, entited "The Martinolar Method."

It is an exhaustive treatise on the very important subject of the teeth and is a book that every man and woman should read and study, whether or not they are wearing a partial plate or ordinary bridge work.

The chapter on pyorrhea is worth a great deal to those who are suffering with this disease and have despaired of ever being cured, for we DO cure pyorrhea unless it has run so long that a cure is impossible.

In any event no one should give up until we have had a chance to pass on the case, for many cases that the average dentist would pronounce hopeless are curable through our methods.

Another chapter in this interesting book is the one headed "The Gentle Art of Painlessness," which is mighty comforting to those who have been afraid of the dentist and were suffering as a consequence.

WE HAVE PRACTICALLY BANISHED ALL PAIN FROM THE DENTAL CHAIR.

You may come here and take a seat in the chair and prepare for a comfortable visit.

We want to get this book into your hands as quickly as possible. A postal card will bring you a copy the same day card is received or as soon as the mail can reach you.

We do the largest dental business in the world and this patronage has come to us through satisfactory service.

No charge or obligation for examination.

FOWLER OPENS WAR ON SPEAKER CANNON

"A Political Bourbon," He Says, "Blinded by Conceit," and a "Traitor" to His Party.

OUT OPENLY TO DEFEAT HIM

Jersey Congressman to Lead a Revolt in Next Congress—Accuses Him and Aldrich of Tariff Conspiracy.

Some o fthe most pungent adjectives in the English language are applied to Speaker Cannon in letters written to him on currency legislation and the recent Tariff bill by Representative Charles N. Fowler of New Jersey. The correspondence was made public by Mr. Fowler himself.

The New Jersey Congressman, whom Speaker Cannon deposed as Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency—a place he had held since the days of the late Speaker Reed—in the last of a series of three letters which he gave out for publication yesterday, boldly throws down the gauntlet to the all-powerful Speaker, and intimates that when the Sixty-second Congress meets he will assume the leadership in a fight to strip the Speaker of the great powers which Mr. Fowler declares have been so shamefully abused by "Uncle Joe."

"You have succeeded in Russianizing the House of Representatives," says Mr. Fowler in his letter. "But unless I misjudge the intelligence, the independence, the pride, the self-respect, the patriotism, and the present temper of the American people, you will be the last of the political Bourbons, and the conditions which made such a creature as you possible will end with the Sixty-first Congress."

Mr. Fowler says every man elected to the next Congress should be required by his constituents to make these pledges:

First: I will vote for a rule which will provide that all places of patronage about Capitol shall be drawn for precisely as the members now draw for the choice of seats, so far as such places may not be reasonably put under civil service rules.

Patronage Held by a "Hog Combine."

"All members of the House who want a square deal and only a square deal, and propose to hold their patronage in their own right and not as a gift, will favor this pledge. For as matters now stand there is always a 'hog combine' which controls the places of patronage, and absorbs them so far as possible for their own selfish ends, some of them having several thousand dollars to their credit.

Second: I will vote to strip the office of Speaker of the House of Representatives of all political power, and make him just what the Speaker of the House of Commons is, simply a presiding officer.

Third: I will vote for a rule that provides that the House of Representatives shall vote for a Committee on Committees; that is a committee to appoint the committees of the House.

"These pledges have become necessary because of your assumption and abuse of power by which you and your confederates have already brought the Republican Party almost to certain defeat, possibly disruption, and destruction; unless 'Cannonism' with all its corrupting, degrading, and paralyzing influences, is torn up root and branch.

"If the Republican Party wins the next Congressional election, it will only be upon the grave of 'Cannonism.'"

Mr. Fowler, who has been the advocate of sound currency reform, and in 1906 introduced a Credit Currency bill, takes up the efforts he made to have the bill prepared in conference with a Committee of Fifteen from the American Bankers' Association. He says:

"After that bill had been reported by the Banking and Currency Committee to the House, I went to you, as was necessary, disgraceful as the necessity may seem, under the circumstances, to ask whether I could call up the bill for consideration, telling you we were then facing a financial crisis, and that something should be done to meet it, and that this bill had been drawn for that specific purpose.

"You literally hooted the idea of a panic, and inquired, 'What in h— does this howling in Wall Street amount to? The country don't care what happens to those d— speculators. Everything is all right out West and around Danville. The country don't need any legislation. Then, I don't take any stock in your d—d asset currency.' As usual, your ignorance and prejudice were all sufficient then.

"But the panic came, as every man who had any intelligence upon this subject knew it would."

Cannon's Currency Record "Rotten."

Mr. Fowler then declares that it was the dictum of the Speaker which led to the passage of the Aldrich Currency bill, which he characterizes as "unsound," "hodge-podge," "useless," and "a disgrace to the statute books," and declares:

"This is your record upon our financial and currency legislation. I challenge you to find a single living man with so rotten a one. It is a record of ignorance or political cowardice or a disgraceful hybrid of the two."

Mr. Fowler said it was to strip the Speaker of his unchallenged powers that he became a candidate for Speaker at the opening of the Sixty-first Congress, and declares that he succeeded at least in accentuating the platform on which he stood—his sole purpose in entering the field—to an extent where hereafter self-respecting members of the House of Representatives need not "crawl upon their bellies like cringing lizzards to crave the indulgence of a recognition of the Speaker."

After stating that "you revel in a glut of brutal power like Nero to terrorize your subjects," Mr. Fowler asks: "Has it occurred to you that you are so intoxicated with your power and so blinded by your conceit that you have come to consider it a divine right founded on that motto of despotism, 'The King can do no wrong?'"

Congressman Fowler then turns to the recent tariff legislation and in connection with it accuses Speaker Cannon of treason against the Republican platform and President Taft himself, declaring that to prove his case he will "adduce stronger circumstantial evidence than that upon which many a man has gone to the gallows."

Exposes the Tariff Deal.

The letter then goes on:

"Now, it seems from all that can be learned with reference to the conference upon the Payne bill that you, with every member's political head in your basket of favors, shuttle-cocked through the Halls of Congress trying to secure the passage of the Aldrich bill; and, disfiguring so far as you could the Payne bill, with the exception of a few schedules.

Criticising the Speaker's appointment of the House tariff conferrees as being first O K'd by Senator Aldrich, Mr. Fowler declares:

"In other words, did you not enter into a conspiracy with Mr. Aldrich to pack the conferrees on the part of the House for the express purpose of adopting the Senate bill so far as possible instead of the House bill with a few exceptions, when you were honor bound to do everything in your power to secure the adoption of the House bill?

"I have gone into these details to lay bare your miserable, contemptible false pretense and to expose your duplicity, treachery, and perfidy to that legislative body over which you preside, whose bill you were bound to defend and not destroy."

Mr. Fowler winds up his arraignment of Speaker Cannon in connection with the Tariff bill thus:

"I challenge you to cite in all our political history a more dishonorable and disreputable piece of business unless, perchance, you cite something in your own career of which the people are not yet advised."

SEEK MORE DURABLE PAPER.

Several Nations in Quest of Medium That Will Better Preserve Records.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Alarmed regarding the permanency of their state papers and other valuable documents, the leading Governments of the world, headed by the United States, are seeking paper of as nearly an indestructible character as can be made. This announcement was made in a statement issued to-day by the Department of Agriculture, which was prepared by F. P. Veitch, chief of the leather and paper laboratory, Bureau of Chemistry, on "The Need for Good Paper."

Already several Governments have introduced stringent requirements with which record paper must comply. The need in this country for more durable paper is a real one, Mr. Veitch declares. Important state papers, correspondence, deeds, bonds, certificates, ledgers, court records, and certain printed documents are so valuable, it is stated, that it is absolutely necessary that the paper upon which they are printed should be as nearly indestructible as possible.

It is declared that the quality of the paper is not the only problem that should give concern. So rapidly are records of all kinds increasing that their proper storage and safekeeping are a serious problem. Paper should be not only durable, but light and thin, so that the burden of its proper handling and storage may be reduced as far as possible.

BLEACHED FLOUR SEIZURES.

Departments of Justice and Agriculture Allied to Crush Industry.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, and through him Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, pure food expert of the department, will have the full support of the Department of Justice in seizing cases of bleached flour pending the decision of the case testing the legality of bleached flour manufacture.

The bleached flour manufacturers have been urging the Department of Justice that until the case is settled they should be granted immunity in continuing their business. After a conference between Assistant Attorney General Ellis and Chemist Dunlap of the Agricultural Department the Attorney General's office promised full support to the Department of Agriculture in seizing all the bleached process flour that could be found. This decision is taken to mean practically that the bleached flour industry will be suspended until the case is finally decided. The offending millers are chiefly in Iowa and Nebraska.

NEW LABOR LAW WORKS WELL

Experimental Statute in Capital Reduces Number of Children Employed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—The labor law in the District of Columbia, which was passed by Congress a year ago as an experiment, is working well, according to the annual report of the labor inspectors which was submitted to the District Commissioners to-day.

The 614 places employing children under the age of sixteen a year ago have dropped to 297, says the report, and the total of 1,226 working children in the District has been reduced to 441. Seventy-eight alleged violations of the child labor law have been prosecuted. Four employers were charged with permitting children to work without permits, four were charged with allowing children to work after 7 o'clock at night, one employer was charged with allowing a child to work more than eight hours a day, one was charged with allowing a child to work before 6 o'clock in the morning, one defendant was charged with aiding in the delinquency of his son, and two persons were charged with aiding in the delinquency of minors.

DESTROYER'S HIGH SPEED.

The Flusser Makes 31.03 Knots in Contractor's Preliminary Run.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Remarkably high speed was made by the torpedo-boat destroyer Flusser in her contractor's preliminary trial in a run off the Rockland course last week.

The vessel scored 31.03 knots per hour, her contract requirements contemplating but 28 knots. Without examining the records the officials say they believe this to be the fastest speed ever made by an American torpedo-boat destroyer, previous records being around 30 knots per hour. Foreign-built vessels, however, have reached a speed of 33 or more knots per hour.

The Flusser is being constructed at the Bath Iron Works, where Capt. William N. Little is the inspector in charge of machinery.

McKENNA NOT TO RETIRE.

Friends of Justice of Supreme Court Deny He Will Leave Bench.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—In the absence of Justice McKenna from the city his friends here scout the report that he is preparing to retire from the Supreme Court Bench. They admit that he is not as robust in health as might be desired, but say that his condition is no worse than it has been for some time.

If he should retire now Justice McKenna would not be entitled, because of lack of age, to the full salary of a Justice. The salary is continued to members of the court who have attained the age of 70 years and have served for ten years. Mr. McKenna has served the requisite time, but he lacks almost four years of being 70 years old.

Rear Admiral Sperry to Retire Soon.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Rear Admiral C. S. Sperry, who took the Atlantic battleship fleet on its cruise from San Francisco to the Philippines and through the Suez Canal to Hampton Roads, will be placed on the retired list on Sept. 3. He then will have reached the age of 62 years. The Admiral is now on duty at the Naval War College, at Newport.

AMERICAN SHIPS IDLE.

Object Lesson for Visiting Congressmen Provided in San Francisco Bay.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 23.—The condition of the merchant marine in the Pacific Ocean was illustrated for the benefit of the Congressional party en route to Hawaii to-day, when the twenty-three Representatives made a tour of San Francisco Bay, where scores of idle vessels lay at anchor.

California Congressmen and officers of all the important civic organizations impressed upon the visitors the necessity for action if any portion of the trans-Pacific traffic was to be preserved to the United States.

MANY MOURN DEATH OF FATHER DUCEY

Actors, Servants, and Society Folk Weep at Popular Priest's Bier in St. Leo's Rectory.

CHURCH'S FATE IN DOUBT

Talk of Selling It Revived, but His Will May Save It—Funeral To-morrow—Hope for Archbishop's Arrival.

Funeral services over the body of the Rev. Thomas J. Ducey—whose death at his Summer home, in St. James, L. I., on Sunday, was announced in the late editions of yesterday's TIMES—will be held to-morrow morning in St. Leo's Church, in West Twenty-eighth Street, of which he was the pastor and founder. Divine office will be recited at 9:30 o'clock, while half an hour later will be held the funeral service, at which solemn requiem high mass will be celebrated.

It is hoped that Archbishop Farley, who is returning home on the Cunarder Caronia, will arrive in time to take part in the services. The Caronia is due late this afternoon, but it is possible that she will not get to her pier until to-morrow morning. Should this be the case, it is feared that it will clash with the funeral arrangements, as a great many of the Catholic clergy in the city are going down to Quarantine to meet their Archbishop.

All yesterday a constant stream of the dead priest's friends called at St. Leo's rectory, in West Twenty-ninth Street, where Father Ducey's body lay in state. The majority of the visitors were women. Many were weeping as they left. They included actors and actresses, servants from the neighboring hotels and houses, as well as folk in society.

Father Ducey's death has revived the discussion raised three years ago as to the advisability of selling St. Leo's Church and erecting another with the proceeds in a neighborhood where the need for a church is greater. It was pointed out yesterday by a prominent Catholic priest that the district in which St. Leo's Church is situated is already well served in the matter of churches, and coupled with the fact that the congregation of St. Leo's has dwindled considerably in recent years, and that its financial position is not all that could be desired, there is a probability that this will be done.

On the other hand, it is announced that Father Ducey has left a will bequeathing his estate to St. Leo's. At the rectory yesterday it was said that no announcement as to what arrangements for the future of the church will be made until after the funeral to-morrow.

Father John Hughes of the Paulist Fathers in West Fifty-ninth Street, after paying a tribute to Father Ducey's memory yesterday, told a TIMES reporter that in all the obituary notices he had seen concerning the dead priest not one had mentioned the building by Father Ducey of the little chapel which lies on the westerly side of St. Leo's Church, and which was erected as a temporary resting place for those who died in hotels and boarding houses.

It mattered not to what faith they belonged. Thus a Rabbi might be found conducting the funeral service over a Jew to-day; an Episcopal minister over the body of a Protestant to-morrow, and so on.

TRY CORPORAL FOR MURDER.

Soldier Who Killed Capt. Raymond Sets Up Defense of Insanity.

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 23.—The trial by general court-martial of Corporal Lisle Crabtree of Troop B, Second United States Cavalry, on the charge of killing his company commander, Capt. John C. Raymond, at Fort Des Moines on June 19, began at Fort Crook to-day. The plea of the defense is insanity. Corporal Crabtree is also called on to answer to the charge of shooting with deadly intent First Sergt. Washburn and Corporal Such at the same time that Capt. Raymond was killed. A number of witnesses were heard to-day. The testimony to-day brought out the following story of the shooting:

Corporal Crabtree, with Privates Faber and Garoff, went to Des Moines on June 12, the day before the shooting. Crabtree had asked Corporal Such for a pass good until 7 o'clock the night of June 13. Through some mistake the pass was made to expire at 7 A. M. Crabtree did not notice the difference, and so overstayed his leave. For this absence Capt. Raymond reprimanded him, but on Crabtree's explanation the Captain said he would let it go. Crabtree then asked to be relieved of his duties as Corporal, saying he did not think he was capable of discharging them. Capt. Raymond said he would consider the request. A moment later Crabtree drew a pistol and began shooting at the Captain. The first shot went wild. Crabtree then turned the weapon on Corporal Such and First Sergt. Washburn, wounding them both. The two men, with Capt. Raymond, attempted to disarm Crabtree, and it was then that Capt. Raymond got the wound of which he died on July 3.

Various witnesses testified that Crabtree was not intoxicated on the day of the shooting. He was quoted as saying that the First Sergeant "had it in for me."

KILLS SON'S WIFE AND SELF.

Man of 75 Was Engaged in a Quarrel with the Young Woman.

SOUTH NORWALK, Conn., Aug. 23.—James Cavanagh, a polisher, living on Spring Hill, a suburb of Norwalk, fired two shots to-day at his daughter-in-law, Mrs. James Cavanagh, Jr., after a family quarrel, and killed her instantly. He then placed the muzzle of the .32 calibre revolver in his mouth and fired two more shots. He died as he was being carried into the Norwalk Hospital.

The murdered woman was about 30 years old. Cavanagh was 75. It is said that there had been frequent quarrels in the household, and that Cavanagh had often displayed a violence of temper which had caused the other members of the household to fear him.

FOUGHT LYNX IN ITS DEN.

South Carolina Hunter Battled with Animal for Three Hours in Dark.

LOWELLVILLE, Ohio, Aug. 23.—Armed with a big knife, William Smith, a South Carolina hunter, crawled into the den of five lynx near here yesterday and killed the leader of the band. The battle lasted three hours. The lynx was six feet in length.

For several months the animals have been a terror to the community. They have killed stock and attacked people. Their den was in a wild, rocky ravine. Smith organized a posse to help him fight the animals, but he had barely got inside when the posse, frightened by the growls of the animals, fled in terror.

The battle was fought in darkness, and the den was so small that Smith was unable to stand erect.

Inquiry Into Chinese Girl's Murder.

Eight witnesses were examined yesterday by Assistant District Attorney Du Vivier and Capt. Cary of the Detective Bureau in an examination being made into the murder of Bow Kum, the young Chinese girl who was stabbed to death early on the morning of Sunday, Aug. 15, at 17 Mott Street, in the rooms of Chin Len, the Chinaman with whom she was living.

Lan Tang and Lan Shong, both said to be members of the Brotherhood of Four Names, and Chu Wah, the three witnesses held in the House of Detention, gave testimony that led Mr. Du Vivier to say that he expected two important arrests to-day.

READY FOR BIG FOOD BATTLE.

Dr. Wiley and Secretary Wilson to Take Opposing Views at Convention.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Col., Aug. 23.—James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture, and Dr. H. W. Wiley, Chief of the Government Bureau of Chemistry, have come to the parting of the ways on the food subject. Each has thrown down the gauntlet to the other, and a battle royal between them is to be fought out at the convention of the Association of State and National Food and Dairy Departments, beginning to-morrow. The outcome may revolutionize food control conditions in the United States and lend an entirely different aspect to the future of the National food law.

Food Commissioners and chemists from the different States, National officers, leaders in medical and scientific organizations and representatives of the food and liquor interests are here to take part in the struggle. Just now the forces seem pretty evenly divided, and no man can tell who the winner will be.

Secretary Wilson was first on the ground, and he has laid his plans of battle well, but it is believed that Dr. Wiley has most of the State Commissioners and chemists on his side. Most of the National officers, however, are flying the Wilson colors, as are many of the State representatives.

An effort will be made by the friends of Dr. Wiley to have the convention renew its declaration against benzoate of soda and other chemicals, and to indorse the attitude of the chief chemist in every stand he has taken.

Quite another aspect will be presented if the friends of Secretary Wilson are in the majority. In such a case it is not probable that the power of Dr. Wiley in the food world will be nullified or greatly curtailed.

The movement for uniform State laws seems to be certain of victory, but it is not just the kind of uniformity that has been advocated by the committee having this matter in charge. Instead of uniform State laws independent of the National law, sentiment has switched to favor uniform State laws conforming to the National law. In the same programme is the improving of the National law until it becomes an ideal measure.

HOLD UP AND ROB TROLLEY.

Masked Men Pile Ties on Track and Collect $42 with Revolvers.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTHINGTON, Conn., Aug. 23.—The trolley car that left Lazy Lane for Lake Compounce at 8:30 o'clock Sunday night fell into the hands of highwaymen at the foot of the steep hill within sight of the lake. As the car was going down the hill at a rate of 35 or 40 miles an hour the motorman, William Price, saw four railroad ties piled across the track about 30 feet away. He threw off the power and put on the brakes. The car bumped against the ties but was not derailed.

As soon as the car stopped two men sprang out of the bushes from the north side of the track and covered the motorman and the conductor, John Adams, with revolvers. Each had two revolvers, one in each hand, and they wore masks. The men were well dressed.

They ordered the trolleymen to hold up their hands, and they did it. They searched the conductor's pockets and took about $42 and a watch. They did not search the motorman, but they took away his watch, his badge, and his cap. They put the money in the cap.

There were two women on the car, Mrs. Helen Bullis and her daughter Mabel, of Bristol. When they saw what was going on they got off the car and ran back toward Lazy Lane. The men apparently did not notice them. The two women were the only passengers.

After the robbers had got the money and watches they told the motorman to go ahead, and they disappeared in the bushes. The motorman ran his car to the lake and the police of Bristol and New Britain were notified. The women were taken back on the trolley car to Lazy Lane. All the money left to the conductor was 3 cents.

TO PROSECUTE RAILROADS.

State Labor Department Will Try to Enforce Semi-Monthly Pay Law.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Inspectors of the State Department of Labor have been working during the Summer to secure evidence against steam railroads of the State which, it is alleged, have failed to comply with the semi-monthly pay law. When the courts open in various sections of the State next month State Labor Commissioner John Williams will present his evidence.

Actions are contemplated against the Lackawanna, the Erie, and the Lehigh Valley Roads in several counties traversed by the railroads, including Broome, Chenango, Oneida, Ontario, Steuben, Chemung, Erie, Onondaga, and Oswego, according to information to-day from the labor department.

In each case the evidence of the agents of the department has been laid before the District Attorney of the county, all of whom have promised to co-operate with the department.

RECORD CATCH OF MULLET.

500,000 Pounds Landed by Fishing Fleet in Search of Menhaden.

BEAUFORT, N. C., Aug. 23.—A catch of mullet aggregating half a million pounds, said to be the largest ever landed on the Atlantic Coast, was made off this port by deep-sea fishermen this morning.

The fishermen went to sea early to-day in search of menhaden, but their boats ran into schools of mullets miles long, and each vessel was loaded to the gunwales with them.

The catch was brought to market here and the entire working force available will be engaged all night in preparing the fish for shipment.

GOULD DECREE TO-DAY.

Frank Gould Not Expected to Object Unless in Regard to Children.

At the request of counsel for Mrs. Helen Kelly Gould Supreme Court Justice Giegerich adjourned yesterday until to-day her application for the final decree of divorce from Frank J. Gould. The interlocutory decree was signed by Justice Gerard on May 20, after the referee appointed by the court had recommended a divorce in favor of Mrs. Gould.

When the matter comes up to-day it is not expected that there will be any objection to the final step in the matter, although some question may arise about the custody of the children. The interlocutory decree gave Mr. Gould permission to have the children from May until December, his wife to have them for the remainder of the year.

The proposed final decree, it is understood, will authorize Mrs. Gould to resume her maiden name, and permit her to marry again, but will forbid Mr. Gould doing so in the lifetime of the plaintiff.

The provisions of the custody of the children, it is said, will remain practically the same as under the interlocutory decree, with the exception that the parent not having them in the stated term may see them for short intervals each week, and that neither parent shall have the right to take them more than one hundred miles away without the written consent of the other.

$5,000 FORGER MADE $19.

Wolff Had $4,481 When Caught and Returned $500 More.

Heinrich C. Wolff, 25 years old, of Ridgefield, N. J., former confidential clerk of Heinrich Schnielwind, a silk manufacturer at 18 West Eighteenth Street, pleaded guilty in the Tombs Court yesterday to forging his employer's name to a check for $5,000 and cashing it at the National Park Bank. He gave no explanation to Magistrate Barlow, simply saying, "I done it."

He was sent to the Tombs in default of $2,000 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Detective Harry P. Oswald, who arrested Wolff last week, told the Magistrate that in addition to the $4,481 found on Wolff at the time of his arrest the prisoner had enabled him to find $500 more, which was in his home, at Ridgefield, so Wolff's forgery netted him only $19.

NEWPORT DIVIDES ON SUFFRAGE GATHERING

Some Summer Residents Think Mrs. Belmont's Meeting Gives an Undesired Publicity.

MRS. VANDERBILT'S DINNER

Hostess Also Gives a Dance at Harbour View—Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs and Mrs. James B. Haggin Entertain.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 23.—Woman suffrage interest will centre here to-morrow, when the first open-air meeting on Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont's beautiful grounds will be held. The lecture will be given by the Rev. Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, President of the National Woman Suffrage Association.

The five-dollar tickets sold by subscription will admit the holder to Marble House, and those sold for $1 will entitle the holder to attend the garden party and the lecture, which will be given in the tent that has been erected on the Cliff Terrace.

Mayor Patrick J. Boyle of Newport will preside, and it is likely that Mrs. Belmont will make a short address. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., and Harold S. Vanderbilt, sons of Mrs. Belmont, are here to assist in the exercises of the day. The public will be admitted at 3 o'clock, and the lecture begins at 4.

The Rev. Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, accompanied by Mrs. Ida Husted Harper, arrived from New York to-day as guests of Mrs. Belmont at Marble House, the former coming from Narragansett Pier.

Sentiment in the cottage colony on the woman suffrage meeting is not altogether favorable, as some of the prominent members are of the opinion the meeting has given Newport altogether too much of the publicity which they do not desire. Too much undesired publicity of Newport was the slogan of the Summer residents all of last Winter in New York and again here this Summer, and not a few of them have purposely refrained from having their entertainments made public.

Tennis players are delighted with their visit to Newport, and are praising the Summer residents for everything which has been done to make their stay pleasant.

Mrs. Arthur Scott Burden, almost recovered from a recent injured ankle while playing tennis, came to the Casino courts with Mr. and Mrs. Eugene S. Reynal, of whom Mr. and Mrs. Burden are guests.

Mrs. Herbert Parsons with her father, Henry Clews, and Mrs. James Francis Sullivan of Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. James J. Coogan with Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Coogan, Miss Jessie Coogan and Jay Coogan were among the early arrivals in the grand stand for the Clothier-Behr match.

Mrs. Margaret E. Emerson came in with her father, Isaac E. Emerson and H. W. Williams of Baltimore, who is their guest.

Mrs. Edward J. Berwind with Miss Julia Berwind and Miss Margaret Duniap of Philadelphia with Mrs. James P. Kernochan, Alexander S. Cochran, who saw the first match of the tennis tournament; Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Miss Lota Robinson with Moncure Robinson, Mrs. Richard Gambrill, Mrs. Oliver G. Jennings, Miss Edith Colford with Mrs. Reginald Norman, and Miss Julia Little, Mrs. James Russell Soley, Mrs. William G. Roelker, Mrs. George Sheldon, Miss May Van Alen, Mrs. French E. Chadwick, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Dyer, James T. Woodward, Edward J. Berwind, Mrs. John R. Drexel, W. Hude Neilson, H. O. Havemeyer, Jr., Dennie M. Hare, Roderick Terry, Jr., Mrs. Royal Phelps Carroll, and Mrs. George H. Benjamin were among the early arrivals.

Mr. and Mrs. H. McK. Twombly, Edgerton L. Winthrop, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Alexander were among the spectators.

Casino registers include Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Scott Burden, Norman Dunning, Hosmer Barrett, Arthur Johns, Moses Taylor, and W. O'Donnell Iselin.

Norman Dunning of Philadelphia is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Bradford Norman.

Hosmer Barrett and Arthur Johns of New York are at the New Cliff and Robinson cottages.

Miss Ellen F. Mason has rented her cottage on Gibbs Avenue, known as Brent Lodge, to George H. Benjamin of New York for one year.

Applications for boxes for the Newport Horse Show next month are coming in still, and in addition to the list previously published the names of Charles B. Alexander, Henry G. McVickar, Miss Fanny Foster, and Theodore M. Davis have been added to the box-holder list.

The annual meeting of the Newport Country Club will be held Saturday, when the question of selling to the Newport Golf Club, which leases the property, will be taken up. The officials of the Country Club believe it would be best to sell their property, which is taxed for $56,000.

This evening Mrs. Ellen Vanderbilt gave a dinner followed by a dance at Harbour View, the dinner being for thirty guests, and later two hundred other guests came in for dancing in the ballroom. A tent on the lawn was erected for the smoking room, and the decorative effect in the house was red and white. Sherry's augmented orchestra played for the dinner and dancing. The verandas were inclosed with waterproof hangings and illuminated with electric colored lights with the floral effect of red and white. It was here the guests sat during the evening and partook of supper after midnight. The weather was perfect and the location a beautiful spot on the elevated portion of Halidon Hill, which commands a perfect view of the surrounding country.

Previous to the dance Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs entertained one hundred guests at dinner at Rose Cliff, where the arrangements of the dining hall were beautiful. The ceiling of the room was arranged in sky effect with small electric bulbs twinkling as if they were stars.

Later Mrs. Oelrichs took her guests to Mrs. Vanderbilt's dance.

Mr. and Mrs. James B. Haggin gave a dinner for thirty guests, using a handsome floral arrangement of Killarney roses and lillies of the valley in Louis XVI. effect. Mrs. Haggin and her guests drove to Harbour View for the dance.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence W. Dolan entertained a large company of guests with a luncheon this afternoon at their home on the Cliffs close to Bailey's Beach, having an orchestra playing for the luncheon and for a little dancing afterward.

Lispenard Stewart entertained a large company with a dinner to-night for Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Witherbee and Miss Evelyn S. Witherbee at White Lodge. Afterward the company went to Mrs. Vanderbilt's dance.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert I. Gammell entertained a dinner company and went to the dance afterward.

Miss May Van Alen will entertain a luncheon company of forty at Wakehurst Saturday.

Miss Victoria Emery of New York is the guest of Mrs. Francis Winslow at Jamestown. Mrs. Edward Lauterbach of New York is at the Muenchinger-King cottage. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jennings of Cold Spring Harbor, L. I., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss.

Some of the leading men and women tennis players will meet at the Newport Casino to-morrow, beginning a scratch event. The list of entries includes Miss Eleanora Sears of Boston and Melville Long, Mrs. Barger Wallach and G. P. Gardner, Miss Ruth Twombly and E. P. Larned, and Dean Mathey and partner.

The third in the series of races by the fifties will be sailed to-morrow afternoon for the cup offered by Henry Walter.

Commodore and Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James are sailing for Europe about the middle of September. During the late Fall the new yacht Commodore James is having built at Quincy, Mass., will meet Commodore and Mrs. James abroad for a cruise in European waters, and about the West Indies. As soon as Commodore and Mrs. James depart arrangements will be immediately started to build their new villa on Beacon Hill, which property Commodore James bought last year. While abroad Commodore and Mrs. James will select the furnishings for their new home, which is to be completed for use next season.

Miss Libby of New York, Vice President of the International Order of King's Daughters, who met with an accident recently, and dislocated her foot, is fast recovering and resting at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Herrick.

More than $1,600 was realized from the performance of "The Liars," given by the Summer residents for the Newport Hospital Saturday evening at Freebody Park.

Henry Spies Kip, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt, has returned to New York.

Miss Eleanore Sears of Boston is visiting in the cottage colony over the horse show and to take part in the tennis matches at the Casino. Next week Miss Sears will visit Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont at Marble House.

Another dinner and dance has been announced for horse show week by Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish at Crossways.

ATHLETES UNDER FIRE.

A. A. U. Expels Local Runners—Daly Charged with Accepting Pay.

Several prominent athletes were put on the rack last night by the Registration Committee of the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Athletic Union at the Astor House. John J. Daly of the Irish-American Athletic Club and James J. Lee of the Mercury Athletic Club were charged with accepting money for running in The Washington Post Marathon race in Washington on May 29. Both declared that they had received money for expenses as permitted; Lee denied that he had received $35 from John O'Shea of Washington as had been charged, but that $17.50 was the total amount paid to him. Daly asserted that he had been offered $30 by O'Shea, but that he had accepted only $25. Decision was reserved until further evidence had been offered.

J. Duffy, W. Hallen, and S. B. Briarton, all of the Acord Athletic Club, were suspended for thirty days for competing for second novice prizes by the Registration Committee of the Metropolitan Amateur Athletic Union at its meeting last night. C. Bishop of Trinity Athletic Club and S. E. Bishop of Mohawk Athletic Club were suspended for thirty days each for the same offense. The latter did not compete in the final of the second race, but is said to have won a heat in a race for which he was not eligible. He was not at the meeting last night.

R. Lee of the Mohawk Athletic Club admitted when confronted by three members of the Acorn Athletic Club, who declared that they recognized him, that he had run in the St. Monica's meet on July 6 under the name of Herman Engstrom. He said he had used the name so that he could qualify in the Kings and Queens events, for which his residence in the Bronx made him ineligible. He declared his club had nothing to do with entering him, and that he won the two races in which he ran. It was announced later by the committee that his act had permanently suspended him from the organization, and that henceforth he would be regarded as a professional.

The National Championship Committee through its Chairman, Bartow S. Weeks, reported that F. C. Steffins of the National Athletic Club, Brooklyn, who was awarded the all-around gymnastic championship, was not entitled to it, owing to a mistake in addition.

FAMOUS PAINTINGS FOR FULTON EXHIBIT

35 Rembrandts and American Masterpieces to be Shown in Metropolitan Museum.

J. P. MORGAN LENDS MANY

Fine Specimens of Silver Fashioned in Colonial Days Lent—Sir Purdon Clarke Is Better.

The Hudson-Fulton Exhibition at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, it was announced yesterday, will be shown in two rooms. One will contain the collection of old Dutch paintings by the great masters. This room will be furnished in the Dutch style, with old Delft pottery and tapestries.

The second part of the exhibit will be in the "American Room," in which paintings of native artists will be exhibited. The room will also contain American furniture and a splendid collection of old silver made in this country. Both rooms will be open to the public at 10 A. M. on Tuesday, Sept. 21.

Henry W. Kent, the Assistant Secretary, said yesterday that there would be 140 Dutch paintings on view. Among the masterpieces lent to the exhibition, he said, are 35 Rembrandts, 19 Franz Halses, 11 Jacob van Riesses, and 5 rare paintings by Vermeer of Delft, which will be of unsurpassed interest to admirers of the fine arts. These paintings will be lent from the Morgan, Huntington, Marquand, and Johnson collections. There are only two other paintings by Vermeer in the United States, it is said.

The thirty-five Rembrandts have been selected from the great collections in New York, Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia, and other cities by Dr. Valentiner, formerly a pupil of Dr. Bode of Berlin, who is a connoisseur in art. The Franz Hals exhibits will consist of a series of nineteen portraits, being the greatest number of his works ever shown together at any exhibition. Two fine specimens of the paintings of Pieter de Hooch have been lent for the occasion by Mr. Widener of Philadelphia.

Silver made in Colonial days will form an important part in the American section. More than 300 pieces will be shown. Of these there will be twenty pieces made by the Reveres, father and son, in Boston early in the eighteenth century.

Among the New York silversmiths represented will be Adrian Bancker, Thauvet Besley, Peter Quintard, R. Van Dyke, Thomas Underhill, Benjamin Wyncoope, and others.

Among those who have lent pieces of silver are George S. Palmer, R. T. Haines Halsey, Judge A. T. Clearwater, Hollis French, and the Trinity Church Corporation. Many of the pieces were collected by the Colonial Dames of the State of New York.

An interesting new feature in the museum's collection is a fine portrait of Erasmus by Hans Holbein, lent by J. Pierpont Morgan. It is a painting in oil on a wood panel 7x5¾ inches in size. Erasmus is shown seated half length. He wears the dark cap and fur-lined coat found in all his portraits.

A contemporary inscription at the back of the panel runs:

"Haunce Holbein me fecit
Johannes(s) Nonryce me dedit
Edwardus, Bauvster me possidit."

John Norris or Norreys and Edward Banister were ushers at the Court of Henry VIII.

It was announced yesterday by the Secretary of the Art Museum that no further anxiety need be felt regarding the health of Sir Purdon Clarke, Director of the Museum, the latest advices received stating that he is rapidly improving. When he left on his annual vacation abroad he was greatly run down and his English physician advised a longer rest.

J. Pierpont Morgan, President of the Museum, saw Sir Purdon in London and advised him to take an extended leave of absence to insure complete recovery.

Mayor McClellan, after a talk yesterday with Herman Ridder, a member of the Hudson-Fulton Celebration Commission, said:

"Mr. Ridder has consented to go to Police Headquarters and look over maps and drawings which have been prepared for the aid of the Police Department in connection with the celebration. There will be four big land parades and one naval pageant. The celebration will attract an enormous number of visitors.

"Inspector Schmittberger, who won experience at the Dewey parade, expects there will be at least 2,000,000 visitors in the city, and that 4,300 policemen will be required to handle the parade crowds alone. We don't want our own people or those who do us the honor to visit us injured during the celebration."

LONG ISLAND AUTO DERBY.

Course Faster Than Vanderbilt Speedway—To Make Inspection To-day.

There has been another change in the date for holding the Long Island Automobile Derby, which is to take place over the Riverhead-Mattituck course. Instead of Sept. 30, as was recently decided upon, the date has been put forward to Sept. 21, so as not to conflict with the Hudson-Fulton celebration.

W. J. Morgan and Samuel H. Shaw, managers of the race, will make an inspection of the course to-day, starting from the Thoroughfare Building, Broadway and Fifty-eighth Street, at 8 o'clock and returning to-night. A number of automobile road experts and motor writers will go as guests of Mr. Morgan.

Ralph De Palma, the famous Flat driver, tried out the Riverhead course recently and pronounced it the fastest road course he had ever driven over. De Palma says that the Long Island roadway is fully three miles an hour faster than the especially prepared Long Island Motor Speedway. The course is about 22 miles long and is in the shape of an elongated triangle, having two ten-mile stretches and a two-mile straightaway. The roads are as smooth and hard as the slate surface of a billiard table.

Five events are to be contested Sept. 21, but they are to be run as a sweepstakes, the smaller cars covering a hundred miles or so and the larger cars covering distances anywhere from 150 to 250 miles.

GERMAN SONDER YACHTS.

Visiting Challengers Put Through Paces at Marblehead.

MARBLEHEAD, Mass., Aug. 23.—All three of the German sonder yacht challengers—Hevella, Seehund, and Margarethe, were put through their paces today for the first time since their arrival in quest of the President Taft and Gov. Draper Cups.

The little boats were measured yesterday by W. Sterling Burgess, official measurer of the Eastern Yacht Club, and to-day all were out for a tuning-up sail off Marblehead Rock, the scene of next week's conflict. The wind was light and the sea was smooth. As the American defenders had been requested to keep away from the foreigners, there was no comparison of speed. The German yachts will have trials every day this week.

There was great rejoicing to-day among both the visitors and the American yachtsmen, when Capt. Otto Pretzen was seen at the tiller of the Hevella. It was thought that an injury to his knee, received last week, might prevent him from participating in the cup races.

Plaudit to be Shipped Home.

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 23.—John E. Madden has arranged for the return to America of the stallion Plaudit, one of his most successful race horses and sires from France, where the horse was sent last Winter to enter the stud. His own need for Plaudit's services more than the lack of attention for the stallion in France is the cause for Mr. Madden's new plan. Plaudit is to be shipped back to New York as soon as possible to go to the Madden farm Hamburg Place, in Kentucky.

STEWARDS' ACTION CAUSES SURPRISE

Public Unable to Understand Disqualification of Queen Marguerite at Saratoga.

TRACK AMBULANCE BUSY

Three Jockeys Hurt in Steeplechase Event—Commodore Fontaine Shot After the Race.

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 23.—The strangest happening in a programme full of sprprises at the race course to-day was the decision of the stewards in disqualifying Queen Marguerite in the first race, a mile selling, which she won in a gallop, and placing the outsider, Mombassa, first. Except for the first few strides Queen Marguerite, ridden by Liebert, was out in front, racing well in hand. Food Pad, the favorite, was off badly, and almost left, and Butwell, who rode him, squandered the horse's speed by rushing him off in mad pursuit of the leaders. Coming to the far turn Foot Pad, going like a quarter horse, rushed up on the heels of the leaders, Butwell trying to take him through on the rail, and being shut off by the leaders, which already had begun to bear over to the rail, anticipating the turn. Foot Pad was thrown back and Queen Marguerite, sailing on in front, won easily by a length and a half from Mombassa, while Foot Pad, coming on again, was third. None of the jockeys made any complaint, but the stewards called up Liebert and questioned him, then disqualified the first horse, and gave Mombassa the race. Spectators, seeking explanation, accepted the report that Queen Marguerite was set back for being short of weight.

R. T. Wilson, Jr.'s, Montpelier Stable named two horses to start in the Kentucky selling stakes, five and a half furlongs, for two-year-olds, but only one horse, A. L. Aste's Glen Helen, was named to oppose them, and Mr. Wilson withdrew Mexoana and trusted to Responseful to win the stake. Responseful galloped second to Glen Helen into the stretch, and then went on and won easily, as the only successful favorite of the day.

FAIR PLAY ARRIVES.

August Belmont's Horse Will Be Put in Training for Fall Handicaps.

August Belmont's four-year-old horse Fair Play arrived here yesterday on board the Atlantic transport liner Minnetonka, returning from an unsuccessful trial on the English turf. Fair Play was the best three-year-old racing on the American turf last leason, and was regarded as about the best racing prospect of the Americans sent abroad when the Whitney and Keene horses were shipped to England. Fair Play ran frequently in important English races, but always was handicapped high and failed utterly to verify his American form. He did not make a poor showing because he was unsound.

Fair Play returned perfectly sound and showed no ill-effects of the voyage. He was at once taken to Belmont Park, where he will be put into training at once for Fall racing. He will be turned over to Thomas Welsh, trainer of the Newcastle Stable, who also has a number of Mr. Belmont's yearlings. Mr. Belmont expects Fair Play to recover his three-year-old form and win some of the important Fall handicaps.

S. J. Meller of Kirksville, Mo., brought over nineteen Percherons, which he will probably exhibit at the Madison Square Garden Horse Show in November. Among the consignment are three horses which won gold medals at the Paris Horse Show.

Charles H. Wilson, manager of Alfred G. Vanderbilt's stable of show horses, was also a passenger on the Minnetonka. He was accompanied by Mrs. Wilson, formerly Miss Florence Schenck. Wilson will go at once to Newport and get Mr. Vanderbilt's horses in condition for the National show. Mr. Vanderbilt's horses, which he purchased in England, came back a week ago.

JOCKEY MAHON'S FALL MAY END IN DEATH

Steeplechase Rider Thrown at the Liverpool at Saratoga in Critical Condition.

BAD MIX-UP AT THE JUMP

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Three horses in a field of seven starters fell to-day in the steeplechase, and one jockey, J. Mahon, was so badly injured that his life late to-night was despaired of, while the veteran steeplechase horse Commodore Fontaine received injuries that caused his owner, J. W. Colt, to order him shot, after he reached his stable. The three horses that fell were the public choices for the race, and two of these, Commodore Fontaine and Sandy Creeker, fell, one almost immediately after the other, at the same jump, the second time over the Liverpool, directly in front of the clubhouse. The horses, with all seven running in fairly close order, had made one turn of the field, and Commodore Fontaine, ridden by Mahon, a jockey comparatively new to racing, had just moved to the front and passed Sparker as they came to the Liverpool.

Commodore Fontaine is an old and unsound horse, with legs that have troubled him for some time, and his unsoundness told on him while he approached the jump. He seemed to change his stride, and the shift brought him so close to the obstacle as he took off that he crashed through the brush on top of the jump and came down in a sprawling fall, pitching his jockey over his head and himself turning a somersault as he landed.

The next three horses got over the jump safely, and then Sandy Creeker, owned by Jay O'Brien and ridden by Dupee, a veteran negro cross-country rider, blundered as he landed over the jump, and fell beside Commodore Fontaine, then struggling to his feet.

Sandy Creeker, in rolling over, jostled against Jockey Mahon, stretched unconscious on the ground, where he had landed from Commodore Fontaine's back. Dupee also lay stunned where he fell. Employes of the track dragged the injured riders out of the path of the horses and the track ambulance hurried to pick up Mahon and Dupee, but had not reached the injured boys before Sunglow, ridden by W. Allen, which raced into the lead after the double accident at the Liverpool, fell at the jump on the far turn of the field and brought his rider down hard, the jockey landing limply on his back and remaining still until the crowd that gathered about him called for the ambulance.

Bobbin Around, a 30 to 1 outsider, went on and won after the three best horses were down. Mahon was the only one of the jockeys thought to be seriously hurt when the ambulance took them to the jockeys' quarters, Dupee and Allen declining any treatment, while Mahon, who showed returning consciousness then, was removed to the Saratoga Hospital, suffering, it was said, from shock. Later in the night he developed alarming symptoms and his family at Hempstead, L. I., was notified of his condition as it was thought he could not recover.

Mahon is said to be suffering from concussion of the brain and a possible fracture of the skull, and with hemorrhages of the throat and stomach. He is about 22 years old and is employed in the racing stable of J. W. Colt.

Did It Ever Occur To You?

A train practically every hour is a good many trains.

To run on water level all the way to Chicago is a guarantee of comfort by day and sleep at night.

To see on one trip the world-famous highlands and palisades of the Hudson, the picturesque Mohawk Valley and Niagara Falls, the greatest scenic wonder on this planet, is at least interesting.

To arrive in Chicago at the only railroad station on the loop of the elevated, is certainly desirable.

But did it ever occur to you that ONLY ONE railway system affords all of these advantages to the traveler?

MANY HITS ON BOTH SIDES; GIANTS WIN

SIX MEN ON THE MOUND

Crandall, Marquard, Gasper, and Campbell Batted Out of the Box—Ames and Dubuc Pounded, Too.

Free hitting being epidemic for the day throughout the country, the Giants and Redlegs yesterday, on the Polo Grounds, batted so heavily that six pitchers were used in a game New York won in the gloaming by a score of 12 to 9. Everybody got a hit except Miller, Fletcher, Tenney, and four of the boxmen. Miller was at bat only once, and was robbed of a two-bagger by Doyle's sensational jumping drawdown of his high liner. Tenney, too, had just one chance, and Fletcher, the first and last time he was up, sacrificed a runner home. All the half dozen twirlers were pounded enthusiastically. It was pay-your-money-and-take-your-choice preference so far as the boxwork went, the Giants winning because they made a little more of their opportunities than did Griffith's men.

Gasper lasted a little more than three innings against the Giants. Campbell faced them for about one round. Dubuc stuck it out from midgame to the finish, but what he withheld in safeties he allowed in battery errors. Crandall was benched after one chapter. Marquard worked from the second through part of the fifth. Ames was hit hard, but just contrived to weather the storm. He couldn't have held Cincy in the rear another round, unless his side had made more runs. Marvelous catches and throws by Doyle and O'Hara saved him in the ninth. It surely was a day of butchery for the knights of the mound.

Cincinnati scored twice in the opening frame on Tenney's muff of Bridwell's throw on Paskert's grounder with one down and Hoblitzell's single that stood for four bases, because Seymour fumbled it. The Reds counted again in the third because Paskert strolled and stole and Mitchell pushed him in with a long single. Then came the inning in which Gasper was driven to cover, the McGrawites registering seven times on Seymour's two-sacker, successive singles by McCormick, O'Hara, and Devlin, Bridwell's double, Merkle's one-timer, Meyer's banner and steal, Doyle's walk, and a sequence of safeties by Seymour, McCormick, and O'Hara.

New York made nine hits in that round, and would have netted more runs had not Seymour rather awkwardly stayed in the path of a batted ball. The result of Si's retirement the first time he was on base in the fourth was that four consecutive hits, one of them a two-bagger, were made before a run came in. It took two doubles and three singles in succession for New York to score, McCormick going only to third on Fletcher's safe smash through short and coming in with O'Hara behind him on Bridwell's two-timer.

Undismayed, the Ruddylegs went after the Dube in the next and beat him to his knees. They made three runs on Bescher's single, Paskert's double, the first of Hoblitzell's triples, and, Ames pitching, Mitchell's hit. It looked bad for a while, as Egan sacrificed and Mitchell, one out, went to third on a wild pitch. But Leon steadied down, fanning Lobert and tossing Downey out to Hob.

Dubuc held the Giants runless in the fifth, but in the sixth they recorded once on Doyle's infield bounce, misjudged by the pitcher, Larry's steal of second, Seymour's jaunt, a double steal, and McCormick's sacrifice fly, turned into a double play by Bescher's long throw to third.

McGraw's men took three more tallies in the seventh, because O'Hara dodged and cried "Ouch!" when an inshoot went near him, thus jollying Umpire Rigler into the belief that he was hit, stole second, went to third on Devlin's hot safe one to Hob, and scored on Egan's wild throw in a fielder's choice on Bridwell's grasser; because Bridwell stole second and made third on Roth's fierce huri, Fletcher coming in on the error, and because, after Merkle trudged and stole and Meyers lined to Dubuc, Ames singled to left centre.

One run was Cincy's portion in the eighth on what Umpire Kane called a two-bagger for Roth following an out, Dubuc's drive for a cushion, and Bescher's force of Dubuc at the midway. New York's twelfth run was made in the same round on Seymour's walk, the advance of Devore, running for Si, on McCormick's out, De Vore's steal of third, O'Hara's stroll and steal, and Fletcher's sacrifice fly. In the ninth Hob tripled again. He was held on third because Doyle ran to O'Hara's territory for Mitchell's fly and snapped the sphere to the plate at lightning speed, and Egan's loft was handled with equal skill by O'Hara. Lobert singled Hob home and stole second, coming in on Downey's one-sacker. Then Umpire Rigler called Roth out on a dubious third strike and the slaughter was at an end.

In the third inning, Rigler permitted a run to be scored by Paskert, although that player ran 'way inside the plate, and did not touch it. Umps didn't even see what the runner did. Neither, apparently, did anybody on the New York team, although Barney Dreyfuss, in a box in the upper grand stand, noted Paskert's sin of omission and grinned at the ease with which the player got away with it.

Even Break in Brooklyn.

Brooklyn and St. Louis divided a double-header yesterday, both games being one-sided. Bell pitched brilliantly in the first, adding another shutout to his record, while the locals batted both Raleigh and Melter freely and ran bases at will, owing to Phelps's endeavoring to catch with a sore hand. The visitors found Pastorious easy picking in the second, while Beebe was invincible. Bergen kept down the runs by throwing out seven men on attempted steals. Burch's all-around work was another feature. Scores:

McGuire in Active Management.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 23.—James McGuire, the new manager, took active charge of the Cleveland American team to-day. At League Park there was an early conference with the team members. McGuire gave the men a short, snappy talk, and then they reviewed the signal code, which was followed by an hour or two of fast practice work.

The most famous maker of soft hats offered us some "seconds."

We asked why they were "seconds"—since they had no flaws.

It seems the color was not just what they wanted.

We compared it with what they did want.

For ourselves, we prefer the "second" color.

It's a greenish gray, called "Nile" officially, but there was mighty little green in the Nile when this color was named.

YANKEES DROP LAST GAME TO WHITE SOX

THE PLAYERS LACKED SPEED

It Was a Pink Tea Affair in Which the Locals Overwhelmed the Visitors, 5 to 1.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 23.—This was the lull after the storm. Winning once over the Highlanders after a terrific thirteen-inning struggle and losing once to them in one of the most nerve-racking nine-round bouts of the season, the White Sox to-day took the third game of the series in the most peaceful and uninteresting way possible, 5 to 1.

After Parent, Cole, and Dougherty had scored in the first inning there was nothing to keep the faithful awake. Frank Smith went through seven monotonously easy rounds, relapsed temporarily in the eighth, and then came back in the final chapter to the path of luxury which he had marked out for himself at the start.

Not a few of the South Side fanatics thought they were at a cricket match and that the management was lax in not serving tea at more frequent intervals. Some were fooled into believing that the Yankees had a rally up their sleeves and would spring it when least expected, but if they did have one concealed about them, they saved it until after the alleged contest and utilized all their speed and pepper in catching their train for St. Louis.

Silk O'Loughlin was out there arbitrating, notwithstanding Frank Farrell's explosion. He didn't appear to give New York any the worst of it, and the strange lack of kicking added to the serenity of the occasion.

Austin's strange bunt opened the only fruitful New York round. It sailed over Smith's head, and Jimmy easily beat it. Sweeney sent the third sacker to his own station with a smash to right. Hemphill batted for Chesbro and obligingly hit into a double play, Austin going to the plate while Parent, Atz, and Altizer were busy. Demmitt rolled a feeble one to Smith. The score:

LEGISLATION BY THE PEOPLE.

Mr. CHARLES L. CORBIN of New Jersey, in a rather clumsy manner, has made an entirely sound statement as to the competence of the people as a body to legislate. He says: "Few of them are wise enough, and those few who have the knowledge have no chance to use it in a popular election, where they can only vote yes or no." This statement was made in the interest of the regular organization of the Republican Party, and against the New Idea Party, which advocates the direct primary, the legislative initiative, and the referendum, and the latter are naturally making the best of Mr. CORBIN'S seeming distrust of the people. While there is much in the aims of the New Idea Party which all reasonable Republicans and Democrats may approve—their opposition, for instance, to the recent scandalous tariff legislation—we are bound to say that their scheme of direct intervention of the people in lawmaking is, in existing conditions, unwise, hazardous, illogical, and contemptuous of obvious and important facts.

Representative government is the invention of modern democracy. It is the most important and valuable product of the political genius of the race since the days of the Roman Empire. Its virtue and its value consist in the fact that by representatives the will of the people can be substantially worked out and applied to the management of public interests in a fairly orderly, consistent, and effectual manner. Without this agency not only could no such result be achieved, but the effort to apply the will of the people would inevitably produce confusion, contradiction, a swarm of blunders, and a corresponding swarm of opportunities for demagogues and tricksters to fatten on the helpless mass of the people. Of course the agency is far from perfect and is exposed to serious abuses, but the imperfections can gradually be remedied and the abuses are as nothing in comparison with those that would necessarily spring up without any adequate organized agency of this character.

The incompetence of the people for direct legislation is not, as Mr. CORBIN unfortunately put it, a matter of wisdom or the lack of it. It is a matter of physical possibility. It is not practicable for the great mass of the voters, with the time and energy they can spare from their daily occupations, to master the facts and form a judgment upon them with reference to all the laws, or even the chief laws, that are required for the proper conduct of public affairs. If they could reach a respectable conclusion as to the naked merits of a single law, they could not, without an utterly inconceivable expenditure of time and labor, ascertain the relation of that law to all cognate laws and to the Constitution by which every law must ultimately be measured. Legislation ought to be a coherent and consistent process, every part related to the rest. Heaven knows it is far from that now. But it is not so hopelessly and mischievously far from it as it surely would be with the direct action of the voters required upon all important acts. If our New Idea friends will examine the Constitution of the United States, an instrument of much authority, to which the wisdom and patient care of sound and capable minds contributed, they will see that to these fundamental facts was accorded great weight. "The people" "ordain and establish the Constitution," which is made as simple and comprehensive as possible, and the very first thing they ordain is that "all legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives." Precisely the same provisions, in the same order and relation, are contained in the Constitution of the State of New York, and, practically, of all the other States. It may be a new idea to discard the teaching of these century-old precedents, but we do not think it is a good one.

As we have before pointed out in the discussion of this general question, the curse of the voters in this country, especially in the several States, is the number of votes they have to cast and the multitude of things they have to vote on. If every one of us were a Solomon for wisdom and a Solon for lawmaking capacity, we could not, to save our precious lives, make up our minds intelligently in regard to a tithe of the things we are supposed to decide by our votes. We do not even try. We take heed of a few general indications, guess as best we may about men and parties and measures, lump the evidence and take a substantially blind leap to a conclusion. It is a physical impossibility for all but a very few of us to do more. Naturally we submit to leaders, and as naturally these leaders are sometimes very poor ones. But the best leaders would be hampered and the worst would have much better chance to mislead the people, if the voters' burden were increased by the introduction of the direct primaries, the initiative, the referendum, and all the other "new ideas" of the time. Real reform lies in exactly the opposite direction. Make the voters' action as simple, comprehensive, and decisive as possible, concentrate responsibility, give them a living chance to use effectively the intelligence they possess, trust them with real power, and the best results admissible will be achieved.

MAGISTRATE KROTEL'S WORK.

Not often has a wretch
With good opinion of the law.

But FRANK HASTINGS, convicted Sunday before Magistrate KROTEL of menacing passengers with his baseball club on the station platform at Bronx Park, approved his sentence. "You are going to the workhouse," Magistrate KROTEL said. "All right, I'm ready," HASTINGS replied. "I guess I ought to." He had expected the Magistrate to be lenient, but his private opinion of what he richly deserved was in agreement with the penalty imposed. The Sunday hoodlums who until they were brought by tens and scores before Judge KROTEL had "rough-housed" with impunity the city's transportation lines, have cherished an open contempt of the Magistrates. Their contempt has changed to respect.

All honor to this Magistrate, whose sterner dealing with these offenders has retrieved the dignity of the police bench. And more power to the strong right arms of Commissioner BAKER'S "peace squad"! There is plenty of work ahead for it.

THE FIRST STEP.

Among the gentlemen of the Democratic faith who will assemble at Saratoga next month for consultation and utterance there may be one or two, not more, who will approve and applaud the advice we are about to offer. Beyond doubt all the others will say that our advice is unwise, untimely, and unacceptable. We therefore offer it with full conviction of its soundness, knowing that politicians are often the worst judges of party policy.

Let the Conference declare that, inasmuch as a candidate who has been three times defeated for the Presidency, ought not to ask further honors of his party, therefore, in the judgment of the Democrats assembled at Saratoga, WILLIAM J. BRYAN should forthwith declare that in no circumstances will he seek to accept a fourth nomination for the office of President.

That is the very beginning, the first step, the cornerstone of Democratic reorganization. The signers of the call for the Saratoga Conference have talked about reawakening the interest and the loyal support of the Democrats of the Tilden and the Cleveland school. The Tilden and the Cleveland Democrats care nothing for their party, will have as little as possible to do with it, so long as it accepts the leadership, the principles, and the quadrennially recurring candidacies of Mr. BRYAN. Before they re-enter the councils of the party he must depart from them.

It may be said that New York is ill-chosen as the State in which the movement to get rid of BRYAN should begin. But it must begin somewhere. If the Democracy of New York demand that he take himself out of the way, other States will follow that sound example. In the South, where they are tired of him, but where Democrats of ability, of principle, and of conviction have largely left the party to go its stupid way to certain doom, the action we advise would have beneficent results. More than one Southern State, we are confident, would declare that the Democracy has had enough of BRYAN. Other States all over the Union would take up the note, and presently it would command the attention of even his reluctant ear. We admit, of course, that this is an unusual form of advice, but the situation is unprecedented, BRYAN himself is unprecedented. He must be forced out, he will not go voluntarily. His leadership brings ruin to the party, but riches to himself. He is too selfish to renounce his opportunity. It must be taken from him.

Then the work of reorganizing the party can be hopefully begun. Evidence of the new birth will naturally be given in declarations of principle in Convention platforms. The Bryan doctrines must be cast out. How great is the need of such an expurgation appears from the expressions of opinion of the signers of the call for the Saratoga Conference, printed in THE SUNDAY TIMES. They reflect a total want of leadership in thought and action. Apparently nobody is doing any sound thinking for the party. That silly and "barren ideality" the direct primary found favor with some, the equally preposterous fad of popular election of Senators was approved by others. One poor man was convinced that there was an issue in our insular possessions. All that is Bryanism, and the sooner the party is rid of it the better. It might be well for the platforms of the Fall Conventions to confine themselves to the single issue of the tariff; that would exclude a lot of pestilent stuff borrowed from the State and National platforms of the last twelve years.

With BRYAN and Bryanism cast out, the Democrats who for almost half a generation have been disgusted with their party and ashamed of it, who have refused to act with it, and whose withdrawal from activity has made possible the springing up of strange and uncouth leaders, would once more feel and show an interest in the fortunes of the Democracy and would aid with their efforts and their counsel in the rebuilding of the party. But the throwing over of BRYAN is the first step.

REAL LIFE IN FICTION.

ROBERT W. CHAMBERS is the latest novelist to be harshly judged (perhaps misjudged) for putting real, living human beings in one of his books. The novelists are always chided when their stories are not lifelike, yet when a personage is discovered in a work of fiction who resembles somebody tolerably well known in real life, no allowance whatever is made for the fact that if the picture of life is to be called real it must closely resemble reality. From the rise of the novel in the early days of the last century nearly every highly successful novelist has labored under the charge of putting his friends or enemies into his books. The charge has been infrequently sustained by evidence.

That a writer who would embody in his books a true criticism of life must closely study humanity as it comes his way is not to be disputed. Inevitably such books will frequently contain personages who remind readers of folks they know. The greatest characters of fiction, to be sure, are typical, conglomerate, and on a plane above the people we meet in real life. But it is not given to all writers to produce Falstaffs, Joe Gargerys, and Jean Val Jeans. The legal status and manner of upbringing of the children in Mr. CHAMBERS'S new novel are not exactly new in fiction, by any means. Wards in chancery abound in English fictitious romance. The great ado made about the fancied likeness of this boy and girl to two living children, well known in New York social circles, naturally advertises a book which otherwise might have missed the profitable popularity of a "best seller." Yet we do not doubt that the author sincerely resents the charge of taking something of his subject from real life. Novelists like to have their books called lifelike, but they hate to have their personages identified with models, whether the identification is real or mistaken.

FATHER DUCEY.

Father DUCEY had been for many years a conspicuous figure in New York life. He had qualities as an orator, as a friend, as an initiator of charities, which served to keep him prominently in the public eye until illness forced him into retirement. Like Joshua Whitcomb in the play, Father DUCEY "read the papers." He made "timeliness" one of his chief aims. He was the foster son and heir of JAMES T. BRADY, a famous advocate and orator in this town, and doubtless learned from him many tricks of oratory. BRADY was a man of might in the forties and fifties of the last century, who saved men charged with murder from the gallows by the force of his eloquence. He was anxious to have his protégé adopt the profession in which he had won National fame and a large fortune, but THOMAS DUCEY chose the priesthood and carried into that calling some of the showier traits of the advocate.

From the pulpit he denounced the Tweed Ring in the seventies and the wicked corporations of a later era, as many other ministers of many denominations did also, and DUCEY was said to have lost many useful supporters by his outspoken utterances on secular topics. Yet he will scarcely be remembered as a social or political reformer. He was no Parkhurst, much less a Chrysostom. Rather as a fashionable priest with a fondness for ignoring settled traditions of the historic Church, and making unexpected remarks on all sorts of occasions, will Father DUCEY be remembered.

For a long while his church was one of the town's sights. To hear DUCEY was one of the objects of a visit to New York by Catholics from other cities. As a dabbler in art and letters, and the supposed repository of vast information on worldly matters, Father DUCEY somewhat resembled Father Forbes, of the baneful trio, the priest, the woman, and the atheist, in HAROLD FREDERIC'S "Damnation of Theron Ware," but he did not fully realize the ideal of that formidable personage, who was only partly studied from real life. In literature and art Father DUCEY'S taste was somewhat juvenile. Indeed, he was often rather childlike in his public utterances on subjects unrelated to religion, and his misunderstandings with the late Archbishop CORRIGAN, a conservative churchman and strict disciplinarian, were due as much to this immaturity of thought as to his supposed revolutionary inclinations. He was probably not of the revolutionary type at all, but he was a conspicuous figure, a man who must have accomplished much good in his time, and one who will not be unpleasantly remembered by the public. The enmities he made are all forgotten now.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Lesson from Canada.

With the strike at the works of the Pressed Steel Car Company already changed from a "labor trouble" into open war, with both sides armed and shooting to kill—and killing—lamentable evidence is provided that this country has not yet learned how to adjust in a reasonable way the differences that arise between employers and employed. The third and by far the most important party to this conflict, the public, does not even know what it is all about, except in a vague way, and can form an opinion as to its merits only by an inconclusive balancing of the accusations made by each side against the other.

It is a most miserable business, and the more miserable because just across our northern border they have invented, and for two years have been applying with almost complete success, an extremely simple and inexpensive plan for preventing both strikes and lockouts. Dr. CHARLES W. ELIOT, turning from the explanation and defense of his shelfful of long-shelved books, reviews in September McClure's the workings of Canada's Industrial Disputes Investigation act, and nobody can read his article without wondering why we do not copy our neighbor's admirable invention.

All there is to the act of a compulsory nature is its provision that there shall be neither strike nor lockout until the rights and wrongs of the case have been investigated and made the subject of a published report by a board of three investigators, one representing the men, one the employer, and a third selected by those two. After the report is made either side or both can reject it at will and start a labor conflict of the old sort if they choose. As a matter of fact neither does. Fifty-five times, in the two years since the law was passed, these boards have been formed, and only twice—when they could not reach a unanimous decision—has there been a failure of both sides to act on their recommendation. Even in the two exceptional cases the strikes were brief and the trouble ended as the board advised.

The advantages to employers, employés, and the public are obvious, and obviously, too, the very best effect of the law is that there has not been, and is not likely to be, under it, any interruption of industry unless at least one side is sure of having a case on which it can appeal to public sentiment and unless the other side is prepared to defy and ignore that sentiment—a sentiment, be it remembered, founded, not on mutual recriminations, but on statements of fact as demonstrated to the satisfaction of one interested and two disinterested arbiters. Dr. ELIOT likes this plan. So do we.

Truly a Moving Narrative.

A tale as full of "human interest" as any we have read—not in a novel—for a long time is rehearsed by The Memphis News Scimitar. To tell it briefly:

Two men living near Memphis not long ago were rivals for the hand of a widow described as young and beautiful. One of the suitors was fifty years old, the other about half his age. Of their comparative wealth nothing is revealed. The widow gave to each about the same, and to both much, encouragement. The men had been friends and remained so, though rivals. At last one of them announced to the other that he had been accepted and that the marriage was to take place on a certain day, whereupon the second man duplicated the statement, with himself substituted as the favored suitor! Still all was peace between them, and on the doubly appointed day they rode toward the fair and doubly fond one's village together.

On the way they passed a country store where both were known and entered it, at the elder man's request. His object, it seems, was to borrow the storekeeper's .38-calibre revolver and to leave behind his own .44, as too large to be conveniently carried during a wedding ceremony. The younger man, having watched this exchange with a thoughtful and attentive eye, found in it a suggestion for himself. He borrowed the other man's big pistol from the storekeeper and put it in his own pocket. Then the two rode on.

Here there is a hiatus in the story. When it is taken up again, the younger man is driving along in a buggy toward home, with the widow beside him, a widow no longer, and behind them rode the rejected and disappointed knight, successfully concealing his emotions. Reaching the country store again, the older man called to the younger to return the big pistol to the storekeeper, so that the other could get his own. The younger man found this request disquieting, as granting it would leave him unarmed. He suggested that both pistols be left at the store. The older man demurred, whereupon the younger whipped up his horse and started off down the road. Before he was out of range the older man shot him several times through the back. As the victim pitched forward in the buggy, the bride screamed, "My God! Are you killed?" The husband replied, "Yes, hush!" and died.

What The News Scimitar wants to know is why he said "Hush!" Was it a reproof to the woman who had caused the tragedy? Was it to conceal from the enemy the success of his aim, in the hope of getting a return shot before the end came? Was it because he had other uses for his last moments than listening to her exclamations? We will let the Wise Ones attempt to answer these questions, but it was queer that he said "Hush!" wasn't it?

It Was All the Fault of the Mails.

No friends are like old friends, even if they do sometimes get angry with us and drop us. Over in the Borough of Brooklyn is a reader and admirer of THE TIMES of many years' standing. When, about two weeks ago, he saw mention in his favorite paper of a deserving family up in the Bronx that was in distress, he dropped as much as he felt able to give in an envelope and mailed it to THE TIMES. For the next two or three days he watched the paper closely for an acknowledgment of his gift along with the others, but none was made. Then he wrote a letter asking an explanation, expecting a reply by the next post. But none came. Then he wrote again, and still no reply.

By this time he was angry through and through at what he thought the discourtesy of his old friend of the breakfast table, so he dashed off to his newsdealer, crying: "Send me that paper no longer; send me another." He also wrote to THE TIMES of what he had done in his haste. This letter, alone of those written by him, came through. It was then explained to the Brooklynite that all his earlier letters had miscarried or they certainly would have been promptly acknowledged.

The old friend, his anger all gone, hastened to write back:

"Candidly," he said, "your letter was just the excuse I was awaiting to take up my old friend, THE TIMES, again. I have been quite lost, searching the unfamiliar pages of another paper."

Posting this letter, and incidentally noticing that the sun was somehow shining brighter than for some days, he made haste to his newsdealer, saying in an offhand fashion: "By the way, suppose you send me THE TIMES again after this. I'll take a copy of to-day's along now, if you don't mind."

NURSES AND PUPILS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The venomous article against "head nurses" which appeared in yesterday's issue is rather amusing—but not based upon general observation. The majority of supervising nurses having obtained the positions by promotion are in full sympathy with the pupil-nurses, and make every effort to ease their many burdens. Every nurse entering the training school is fully informed that the work she is about to undertake is a path of thorns with but few roses, the latter only for those who take up the profession as an ideal, to relieve misery, mitigate pain and agony, and to console the afflicted. The pupil is given one month or two months' "probation" to decide whether to leave or to go on—a period long enough to demonstrate "survival of the fittest."

The discipline the doctor so bitterly complains of is essential to the health and welfare of the patients. A nurse should be disciplined for "failing to give a patient a hot water bag," or otherwise she is just as apt carelessly to put a hot water bag that will mortally burn the patient. Intimacy between house physicians and pupil nurses should be severely punished, as "favored" nurses, relying up their "pull," only too soon lose their interest in their work, except when the "friendly" house surgeon is on duty.

I know of no responsible head nurse who would undertake to countermand an order of her superior physician—none dared to do it when I was around. Furthermore, head nurses also are subject to rules and regulations, and can readily be removed for cause.

THE BELLS.

Consider the Metropolitan Clock Chimes Wholly Desirable.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A few days ago my wife and I returned to the city and happened to be in the neighborhood of the Metropolitan Life Building. To our intense pleasure and surprise we were greeted by the exquisite tones of the bells chiming the quarter hour in the tower. We both remarked the sweetness of the harmony produced by these melodious bells, and it was with the same pleasure that we heard them repeated for several hours.

I happened to remark to my wife that I would buy her a new gown if there did not come a protest from some person with an unmusical ear within the week. I was not surprised, therefore, to read in to-day's TIMES the two complaints, but I am grieved to know that any one is still living in this city so lacking in the love of the beautiful as not to join in a thanksgiving to the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company for having provided bells so tuneful and soft as to rival the famous and historic Westminster chimes of London. What a storm of protest would arise from our cousins across the water should a complaint be published or an attempt made to stop the ringing of those bells.

Let us continue to direct our efforts to the end of ameliorating the harsh and discordant and avoidable noises of this city, but let us congratulate ourselves in the possession of these beautiful bells, which are not only a continual source of pleasure, but will serve in supplying a need in telling us the correct time every fifteen minutes.

New York, Aug. 21, 1909. THE BELLS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The raucous cries of unmusical newsboys, the shrieking clatter of surface cars, the myriad noises of every sort of automobile horn—these are a part of the neighborhood to be expected and endured. On the other hand, high in the air, in the tall tower of the Metropolitan Building, hang four musical bells. So high above the crowds are they that their massiveness is completely lost; so high in the winds of heaven that their notes float down like fairy chimes. This chime sounds at regular intervals, so regular that at last the car must inevitably reach a point when it no longer hears it, except subconsciously, like the chiming of a familiar clock in one's own apartment.

Are we so eaten up with our interest in our much-talked-of nerve centres that as a city we cannot endure musical bell ringing the like of which has rung in older civilizations for centuries, making their bell towers famous?

New York, Aug. 21, 1909. NEW YORKER.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why all this objection to the chimes being played every fifteen minutes? Is it not a pleasant break in the monotony of noisy street cars, elevated trains, unearthly sounding automobile horns, and shouting, screaming children? I live a short distance from the Metropolitan Building, and enjoy the music of the chimes.

"AUDI ALTERAM TARTEM."

New York, Aug. 23, 1909.

The Lone Horse Car.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am interested in your story of the one cat, with horse, driver, and conductor, which stands day and night on Church Street, near Chambers. Does the Metropolitan system franchise permit the continuous blocking of the street or the use of the public highway for storage purposes? If the Metropolitan receivers are not running their dinky old car, they are, obviously, both blocking the street and using it as a car barn. Should they continue this ridiculous practice until cold weather sets in I am sure of one thing—the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals will get after the person responsible for keeping a shivering horse standing on the street for hours at a time, even if blanketed. Such nonsense! It is the duty of the traffic policeman on the Church Street beat to keep things moving.

THE SUMMERER OF 1929.

No babbling brooks babbed where I stopped,
No happy angler anged,
No tall and stately poplars popped.
No jangling cowbells janged.

No cackling hens cacked in the morn,
No song-birds ever sung,
No bluebirds blew their notes forlorn,
No bungalow there to bung.

No daisies dazed my sight up there,
No climbing ivy clumb,
No scent of clover clove the air,
No bumble bees to bumb.

No gobblers were up there to gob,
No beetles there to beet,
No red-breast robbins there to rob,
No sheeplets there to bleat.

No hollyhocks were there to hock,
This Summer where I summed,
No mocking-birds were there to mock,
No tumble-bugs e'er tumbed.

No purly streams purled up that way,
No little lambkins lambed,
No crickets cricked there night or day,
No swimmers there who swamed.

No sassafras to give us sass,
No weeping willows wept,
No cauliflower cauled, alas!
No creeping vinelets crept.

No speck was seen of speckled trout,
No chip of chipmunks spry,
No quill of quail, no sprig of sprout,
No butt of butterfly.

No maize was up there to amaze,
Of buckwheat not a grain—
* * * * * * *
For I spent all the Summer days

SHONTS MAKES NEW DEMAND.

Insists Upon Thorough Inquiry by Windsor Trust into Heinze Swindle.

The situation in the Windsor Trust Company in connection with the Joyce-Heinze fifty-thousand-dollar loan became acute again yesterday on account of a controversy with Theodore P. Shonts, started by Jordan J. Rollins, counsel for the trust company. Mr. Shonts is the Director who demanded an explanation of the trust company officials as soon as the Windsor Trust's connection with the deal became known.

Mr. Rollins said last week that Mr. Shonts's original letter to the Executive Committee had been answered, but that Mr. Shonts must do all the talking about it. This, and a statement by Mr. Rollins that the Executive Committee of the trust company would not consider the loan matter at its meeting to-day, was told to Mr. Shonts yesterday.

Mr. Shonts forthwith wrote a strong letter to Mr. Rollins, and it is expected that he will back up the letter by action when the Windsor Trust Directors meet to-morrow.

There was a report in Wall Stret late yesterday that Mr. Shonts would resign from the Directorate if the situation within the Windsor Trust were not cleared up.

Donald Persch did not implicate any more people "higher up," as expected. Instead, he pleaded not guilty before Judge Mulqueen, in General Sessions, to the charge of larceny, on which he was indicted.

A. D. S. Adams of Boston, who is under indictment with Persch in connection with a loan of $7,000 to a client of Cram, Mulliken & Co., did not succeed in getting bail yesterday, and remains in the Tombs.

The only other happening in connection with the Heinze-Joyce loan was the re-indictment of Walter L. Clark, the loan broker, for a second offense of felony, which on conviction means a minimum sentence of ten years.

REYNOLDS HERE TO SEE LOEB.

Acting Secretary Pleased with Conditions in Custom. House.

James B. Reynolds, who is Acting Secretary of the Treasury in the absence of Secretary MacVeagh, at his Summer home, came to New York yesterday to settle several questions of customs administration under the new law. The Acting Secretary called on Marion De Vries, President of the Board of General Appraisers, and Appraiser George W. Wanmaker. With Mr. Wanmaker the Secretary discussed various routine matters.

Later Mr. De Vries and the Acting Secretary held a consultation. It is understood that Mr. Reynolds was much pleased with the conditions found at the board as well as with the efficiency of the clerical force.

Mr. Reynolds will call on Collector Loeb to-day and take up various subjects relating to the administration of the tariff. The collection of the tax on foreign-built yachts will be taken up. The collection of the tax from corporations, the Acting Secretary said, will be under the direction of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and not under the customs division, as at first anticipated.

Mr. Reynolds stated that another batch of instructions regarding the administrative details of the new tariff will be promulgated shortly.

To-day, the Acting Secretary, in company with Collector Loeb, will make a tour of the various steamship piers on a revenue cutter, as he wishes before returning to Washington to inspect the handling of passengers' baggage at this port.

GLEN ISLAND MAY BE SOLD.

Syndicate Negotiating for the Starin Resort Property.

Negotiations are said to be well advanced for the sale of Glen Island by the estate of John H. Starin to a syndicate headed by Max Marx, a prominent real estate operator. Mr. Marx said last evening that no contracts for the property had yet been signed, and that the transaction was not in such shape as to warrant any talk about its details.

Glen Island was developed by the late Mr. Starin into one of the best-known day resorts around New York. It was opened about 1880, and was operated during the Summer months up to about four years ago, when it was closed and placed on the market for sale.

Although known as a single island, the property really consists of five small islands connected by bridges. Mr. Starin spent a large sum in beautifying the place. The islands are a few hundred feet out in the Sound, near the southerly boundary of New Rochelle, and not far from the New York Athletic Club's Summer home at Travers Island.

If the negotiations with Mr. Marx have a successful outcome, it is said that the new owners intend to subdivide the property into villa sites.

Not Ready to File Answer to Bingham's Libel Suit—Bingham Presses It.

Decision was reserved by Supreme Court Justice Giegerich yesterday on the application of counsel for Justice Gaynor of Brooklyn, asking for an extension of time in which to file his answer to the $100,000 libel suit brought against him by former Police Commissioner Bingham. The suit grew out of a letter written by Justice Gaynor to Mayor McClellan in regard to the case of George B. Duffy, whose picture was placed in the Rogues' Gallery by Bingham, though Duffy had never been convicted of crime.

Counsel for Gen. Bingham, in opposing the motion, said his client was anxious to have the suit come to trial at the earliest possible moment in the October term, and insisted that there should be no further delay as two stays of twenty days each had already been granted.

Justice Giegerich, in reserving decision, said that in the present condition of the calendar he did not believe the case could be reached by the October term.

GREEN BACKS TEXAS

Hetty Green's Son Says It Will Show the Greatest Increase of Population.

Edward H. R. Green, son of Mrs. Hettie Green, who is on here from Texas for a vacation, yesterday prophesied that Texas will stand high in the census of 1910. Mr. Green said that the report which came from Dallas announcing the population of the State to be 5,700,000 did not astonish him at all.

"It's an easy thing to handle millions in words, but those figures mean big things for Texas. The 200 counties of the State cover a width that would extend from New York to Chicago. Those figures do not astonish me.

"I venture to predict," said Mr. Green, "that Texas will exceed all States in the increase of population when the result of the coming census is known. Trainload after trainload of people is rolling into the State."

Woman Suffrage in Colorado.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The accounts of woman suffrage in the State of Colorado are so unsatisfactory that I am sure the following quotation from a letter of Gov. Shafroth's is worth your consideration.

Hotel Champlain, Aug. 19, 1909.

The reports that are made that woman suffrage is a failure in Colorado are absolutely and unqualifiedly false.

Every reform movement has been advocated by women, and we have had substantial results from their votes. Yours truly,

JOHN F. SHAFROTH, Governor.

Stamps and Cents.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Apropos of the "Brenner cent," I would like, as a picture painter, to express to you the feeling of delight in looking at our new stamps, which are truly beautiful, in contrast to the impression made by the new coin, which is not so. It seems to me mostly a portrait of Lincoln's coat, the style of which, being similar and on a par with the ugliness of the modern masculine garment, I do not think we need trouble ourselves to preserve it to posterity upon our coinage. But do tell us who the author of the stamps may be. He should have as much deserved advertisement of fame as our coin designer of his infame.

TAFT AND ALDRICH TO DISCUSS FINANCE

WILL DEFEND TARIFF RECORD

President Not to be Silent on the Aldrich-Payne Bill on His Tour—His Golfing Record.

BEVERLY, Mass., Aug. 23.—President Taft's grasp on the shaft of the golf club and the side of the automobile was considerably firmer to-day than on the reins of government, although he found time to glance over his morning mail, discuss a few questions with the Secretary of the Treasury, and pass smilingly and unscathed through the bi-weekly inquisition of the newspaper men. He saw no visitors of importance, not even an anxious delegation from Dallas, Texas, who made a long and unfruitful journey to obtain the President's consent to lengthen his stay in that city until the morning light should break.

The most important news items of the day were the announcement that Frank A. Musgrove of Hanover, N. H., would be appointed Census Supervisor for that State; the definite statement that there would be no diplomatic changes until after Congress convened; the expected arrival on Thursday of Senator Nelson W. Aldrich of Rhode Island to discuss the report of the Monetary Commission, and the intimation that the Administration was prepared to defend its record on the recent tariff legislation.

Any report of immediate changes in some of the foreign missions is discouraged, although Ambassador Reid will see the President on Friday, and will probably have a few words to say regarding the attitude of the British Government toward this country at the present time, and its wishes as to the next American representative at the Court of St. James's.

Mr. Reid desired to visit Beverly on Thursday, but that day was already set for the coming of Senator Aldrich, who will go over with the President and Secretary MacVeagh a portion of the report of the Monetary Commission. It is understood that the report is in a more complete form than even the President expected, and it is possible that it will be in shape by the time Senator Aldrich returns from his four weeks' trip to Europe. It is probable that the Senate leader will discuss also other financial matters with the President and the Secretary of the Treasury.

If the Western opponents of the new Tariff bill expect silence from the President or a reluctance on his part to discuss its different provisions, they will be disappointed. The Administration is ready and willing to debate any and all the schedules.

Returning to the census appointments, the President has selected 230 supervisors and has 134 more to discover. He hopes to find the most of them before he leaves for the West, as well as the members of the so-called Foreign Tariff Commission.

Agreeable outdoor recreations again occupied the greater portion of the President's waking hours to-day. He introduced Rollo Ogden of The New York Evening Post to the Myopia course, and beat him 2 up and 1 to play. The President thinks the tenth hole at Myopia the hardest that he has yet tackled.

This afternoon, after Capt. Butt had spent an hour in map studying, the big motor sped out of the long drive and started on another exploration tour of Northeastern Massachusetts. This time Capt. Butt knew the road and brought the party back before dark. Yesterday the Presidential party was lost for a couple of hours in the highways and byways of Arlington, Cambridge, and Somerville, in an effort to follow the route of the British retreat from Lexington. It is scarcely twenty-five miles in a fairly straight line from Beverly to Lexington, but the record on the Presidential automobile marked eighty-four miles when it finally stopped in front of the Taft cottage at 9 P. M., after five hours' run.

Still, the President enjoyed his longest motor trip, and especially his fleeting glance at the historic common and its silent minute man sentinel, and some day he hopes to look across the bridge that spans the flood and see the minute man of Concord, as well as the Old Manse hard by.

Mathematicians have figured that the President has played 252 holes of golf and might be able to hole out 342 times more before he leaves, on Sept. 14.

CAR LINE RECORDS GONE.

Still More Important Data Concerning Third Avenue Development Missing.

When Commissioner Maltbie of the Public Service Commission began a hearing yesterday in connection with the commission's appraisal of the surface railway properties of Manhattan, it developed that more records of the Metropolitan Street and Third Avenue Railways had been lost. These records in particular refer to the cost of electrifying certain parts of the roadway that the Metropolitan and Third Avenue have used in common.

The commission is endeavoring to get at an idea of the physical valuation of the Third Avenue Road for use in passing upon the reorganization plan submitted by the Bondholders' Committee, among other things. For several months its engineers and accountants have been trying to get accurate figures, with considerable difficulty, and now a point has been reached where the receivers of both the Metropolitan and the Third Avenue are forced to admit that many records are gone.

The electrification in question was done during the control of the Third Avenue by the Metropolitan Street Railway, among other places in Seventh Avenue, between Forty-second and Forty-fifth Streets, and in Broadway, between Sixty-fifth and Seventy-first Streets. During the same period the proceeds of about $10,000,000 of the Third Avenue's refunding bonds were supposed to have been put into the property, and Receiver Whitridge of the Third Avenue has stated that he has been unable to find evidence of the expenditure of this money.

When the loss of the records became known yesterday, Herbert J. Bickford, counsel for the receiver of the Third Avenue, sought to have the hearings postponed until October. Mr. Maltbie declined, and they will be taken up again in the near future.

WANTS 5TH AV. STAGE REPORT.

Public Service Board Calls for a Statement of the Route and Fares Charged.

The Public Service Commission, under the authority of the Transportation Corporations law, passed by the last Legislature, announced yesterday that it had taken the Fifth Avenue stage coach line under its supervision. This company, originally controlled by Thomas F. Ryan, but now by the Metropolitan Securities Company, has a franchise which enables it to operate on practically any street in the city.

The Commission has called upon the company to file its route, a statement of its tariffs and its transfer points so that the Commission may take up various service complaints that have been received. The Fifth Avenue Stage Coach Company a few years ago substituted electric stages for its old-fashioned horse coaches.

About the time that the Third Avenue railway was cut off from the Metropolitan Street Railway and transfers were abolished in Forty-second and Fifty-ninth Streets, the stage coach company began to extend its operations from Fifth Avenue proper and run a line of buses up Fifth Avenue to Fifty-seventh Street, through Fifty-seventh to Broadway, up Broadway to Seventy-second Street and thence to Riverside Drive. These buses which charge a ten-cent fare, have been largely patronized by shoppers from the upper west side.

When one play can give you three love stories running side by side, a fight between capital and labor, an incident of frenzied finance carried to its finish, an attempt at suicide, a forceful hold-up of the capitalist on his own yacht at the point of a revolver, a meeting of a Clearing House committee in which heroic virtue is properly rewarded, and about all the bromidisms of capital and labor that pass muster as common currency in discussions of the subject, that play truthfully may be said to have something in it. "The Dollar Mark," in fact, is full of plot. And the plot is full of dollar marks.

Its hero is a self-made man who owns a mine that consolidated interests want to get. And, of course, consolidated interests will stop at nothing.

In the first act the hero is in his working clothes, and denounces the capitalist, who, having learned that the property cannot be secured by ordinary process of bribing legislators, comes to buy him out. He is a nice, open-faced, frank sort of a capitalist, who tells all about how powerful he and his associates are right out in the open and who doesn't mind in the least talking about how they control lawmakers, banks, railroads, everything, in fact, so that they can laugh ha ha! at the laboring man. He says all these things right out loud where anybody might hear, just like real capitalists, who are always just that ready to take everybody into their confidence. And, of course, the mine-owning laboring man reads him the riot act then and there, and tells him how the people will eventually rise in their own defense. Also, he refuses to sell the mine.

By the time the curtain rises on the second act the young man has not only made a success of his mine, but has become President of a bank. And by this time the major capitalist of the consolidated interests has discovered that this young man not only stands between him and his monopolistic schemes, but also has crossed his path in love. Hence he is determined more than ever to crush the young man. And events have so arranged themselves that both men and all the ladies are visiting the same country house, chat of the capitalist's confidential man. This person, it now develops, has been speculating and has reached a point where ruin stares him in the face. But he finds a friend in the successful young banker, who is willing to help him out if he can provide the proper securities. The only man who can furnish these is the capitalist, who agrees to do so, and then goes back on his word, thereby involving the young banker with the Clearing House.

This point has not been reached, however, until the capitalist has tried to prevent the banker from reaching his office intime to avert a panic by delaying the yacht on which they are all sailing from the Long Island Summer home to New York. Whereupon the young banker, who has been reared in the West, draws a revolver, previously taken from the capitalist's son, who was about to kill himself, and forces the capitalist to tell the Captain to put on full speed. Incidentally there is a story of the confidential man's misunderstanding with his young wife, who has loved him all the time, but who has allowed another honorable suitor to dawdle at her heels, and there is another story concerning the capitalist's son, who has married a manicure girl, and who is cast off without a penny when his father finds it out. That is the moment when he threatens to kill himself, and is prevented by the young banker, who goes through the piece shedding kindnesses and platitudes, and is finally rewarded by the indorsement of the Clearing House committee and the hand of the right woman, after the knavish doings of the capitalist are brought to light.

The Wallack's Theatre audience apparently enjoyed the play last night, and approved of its sentiments, most of which were entirely familiar and quite right enough as far as they went. Mr. Broadhurst, the author, being in a position to make his people what he liked, naturally made his capitalist as unsympathetic as possible, and in that way Mr. Cuyler Hastings acted him. Also, the young miner-banker being made as virtuous and heroic as could be devised by any playwright found himself sympathetically portrayed as such by Mr. Robert Warwick. Miss Selene Johnson, Miss Pauline Frederick, and Miss Frances Ring were able to deal quite fairly with the material the playwright provided them, and Mr. Hazzard Short, Mr. Clay Clement, Mr. George Wright, and Mr. Robert Haines met all the requirements. Neither the play nor the tasks of the actors are of such a sort as to demand fine shadings of opinion. Obviously intended to make an appeal to popular taste in melodrama "The Dollar Mark" will probably enjoy prosperity. And as it is quite harmless it is to be hoped that it will for everybody's sake.

Mr. Broadhurst made a brief speech, in which he acknowledged his indebtedness to Charles T. Dazey for the scenario of the play, and William A. Brady made his familiar first-night appearance with decks cleared for action, that is to say, minus his coat.

Final Settlement of Cooper Estate.

The report of the appraisal of the estate of ex-Judge William Frierson Cooper of Tennessee, who died on May 7 last, was filed with the Surrogate yesterday, showing the gross personal estate to be $282,724. His brothers, Addison and Edmund, and his sisters, Mrs. Eloise C. Stockwell and Martha Cooper, each receive $31,250. His brother, Col. Duncan B. Cooper, who, together with his son, Robin J. Cooper, were recently convicted, and are now out on bail pending an appeal, for the murder of Senator E. W. Carmack of Tennessee, receive the life interest on $11,055.

"IN HAYTI" IS SHOWN.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 23.—McIntyre and Health appeared to-night in "In Hayti," a production by Klaw & Erlanger, at the Euclid Avenue Opera House.

Although this is the home city of A. L. Erlanger, this is the first time he has ever made the first production of a play in this city. At the end of the second act Mr. Erlanger was called upon for a speech. He said in part:

"I am very glad that you have given me an opportunity of appearing behind the footlights again, because I have not appeared on any stage since that last time I performed in this very theatre. In fact, they would not let me appear. If some of my old friends are present to-night, they will probably remember that my first public appearance was made at the old Academy of Music at the benefit of Francis Finney, a brother-in-law of John Elisler. I recited the poem of 'Shamus O'Brien.' I know I did it well, because there are fifty-six verses in the poem, and the audience allowed me to finish it.

"The first line of that poem—'It was just after the war of the year '98'—has furnished the newspapers with ammunition to bombard me with ever since, and if I had known as much then as I do now, I would never have changed the line to read 'It was just after the war of the year '88,' because I have been accused of being in a war ever since.

"But, fortunately, theatrical wars are not as serious as real warfare. In real battles armies oppose each other with infantry, cavalry, and gatling guns, while the ammunition of theatrical wars consists largely of hot air."

The play will open at the Circle Theatre, New York, next Monday.

DISCUSS OPEN DOOR IN SOUTH.

Southern Managers Debate Remaining with Klaw & Erlanger.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Aug. 23.—The question of whether there shall be an open door in the South was discussed to-day at a meeting of theatrical managers representing playhouses from Virginia to Florida and thence to Arkansas. The meeting was held behind closed doors.

While no authoritative announcement was made it is understood that the proposition of an "open shop" policy failed to meet the approval of the majority of the representatives.

Some of the managers favored defying Klaw & Erlanger at any cost, but the majority seemed to think that they were not in a position at present to fight for the open door. Among those present was A. Thalheimer, representing Albert Weis, who controls the Texas circuit. Weis's agent was the most pronounced advocate Klaw & Erlanger had at the meeting. The session was stormy, and there will be another meeting to-morrow.

OPERATION ON E. R. KENNEDY.

Former Brooklyn Park Commissioner Suffered Severe Attack of Appendicitis

With the news yesterday of the illness of Elijah R. Kennedy, former Park Commissioner of Brooklyn, and President of the Shore Road Commission, who is recovering from an operation for appendicitis at the Long Island College Hospital, it became known that he was seized with an acute attack of this malady on Saturday during a visit at the home of his daughter at Scituate, Mass. He was hurried to his home on a train from Boston.

He arrived at his home in the care of Mrs. Kennedy at 7 o'clock Saturday night, and after a consultation between his family physician, Dr. Tilney, and Dr. Rushmore, an operation was decided upon as the only chance of saving his life. He was removed that night to the hospital, and the operation performed on him at 1:30 o'clock Sunday morning. It was said at his home last night that his recovery is assured.

Mr. Kennedy was Park Commissioner in Brooklyn for two terms under Mayor Low. He is President of the New England Society of Brooklyn, the Hamilton and the Montauk Clubs. He is 69 years old.

O'Brien, President of the Southern Express Company, who has been confined to his bed in his apartments at Sherry's with an attack of pneumonia since his arrival from Europe on the Amerika last Saturday, was reported yesterday by the doctors to be progressing satisfactorily. He had gained strength since Sunday, they said. Mark J. O'Brien, his nephew, who has been in constant attendance at his uncle's bedside, said that Col. O'Brien caught a slight cold before sailing from Hamburg. On the arrival of the liner he was very weak and a specialist was sent for and found the Colonel to be suffering from pneumonia in his right lung.

'THE FLAG LIEUTENANT' OPENS

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 23.—Charles Frohman made the second of his productions to-night at the Apollo Theatre when he presented for the first time in this country "The Flag Lieutenant," an English play.

The drama opens on board of a warship in the harbor of Malta. The Admiral of the Mediterranean fleet is at a reception. In the midst of gayety word comes of an uprising in Kandia, and help must be sent at once. Major Thesiger is ordered to proceed immediately with a gunboat. Flag Lieutenant Lascelles goes with Thesiger.

Thesiger makes an attempt to scale the walls at Kandia and is dangerously wounded. Lascelles scales the walls, signals the fleet, and the threatened massacre is averted. The bullet which hit Thesiger robbed him of all memory. No one but the surgeon and telegrapher knows of the part that Lascelles has played. Lascelles determines Thesiger shall have all credit and explains his absence from the scene by saying he was asleep.

Insinuations of cowardice are made against him. At the last minute the true story is brought out, and Lascelles comes into his own. Lascelles is acted by Bruce McRae. Isabel Irving has the part of Mrs. Cameron. Francis Carlyle is cast as Major Thesiger, and Lumsden Hare, an English actor, as Admiral of the fleet.

Louisville Managers Sue E. D. Stair.

Edward D. Stair of the firm of Stair & Havlin, theatrical mangers, is the defendant in a Supreme Court suit brought by David B. and Max Weber of Louisville, Ky., for an accounting of a partnership agreement entered into by the defendant and plaintiffs on Sept. 21, 1903. The assets contributed to the partnership agreement, says the complaint, included a lease of the new Masonic Theatre in Louisville, Ky., which extended until the present month, with right of renewal, and another lease upon the Avenue Theatre in the same city. The plaintiffs assert that the latter lease expired in July last and that Stair obtained a renewal in his individual name and during the life of the partnership.

"Newspaper men are so charmingly susceptible," said Hattie Williams, during the third act of Michael Morton's new comedy, "Detective Sparkes," which was produced last night at the Garrick Theatre. Not only newspaper men, but the audience as a whole, seemed to be susceptible, both to Miss Williams's charm as a comedienne, and to the interest of an unusual play.

"Detective Sparkes" is neither a farce nor a melodrama, but a clever combination of both, and nothing nearly so classic as a "comedy" as the programme described it. It is undoubtedly amusing, the unexpected happens at every turn. The situations, however, are more clear than the dialogue.

The reason for the play is that Lady Axminster very foolishly goes up in a balloon with a man who is not her husband when she is supposed to be going on a visit to her sister, Athole Forbes. The balloon comes down a wreck, and is discovered by the police. The papers are full of the balloon mystery, but no one knows the identity of the man and woman in the balloon, and they have completely disappeared.

Miss Forbes, who is an American, discovers that it is her sister who is in trouble, and for the next three acts she devotes all her energies to keeping Lord Axminster from discovering the truth and to finding and saving her foolish sister.

In the course of the action, which covers the period of from 5 o'clock in the afternoon until 3 o'clock the next morning, Athole represents herself as the famous Detective Sparkes, hence the name of the play.

It would be too bad to spoil anybody's enjoyment of the unexpected by retailing the various turns of the plot. It is enough to say that the plot turns so often that it would be almost impossible to describe it in detail.

The rôle of Athole Forbes keeps Miss Williams on the stage very nearly all the time during the four acts. She could not have found a more suitable vehicle. Her scene in the darkened hall, when she steals her brother-in-law's miniatures, only to awaken the house with two revolver shots, and another when she goes away to save her sister, disguised as a chauffeur, were especially effective and entertaining.

The company is headed by Julian Royce, who plays Fred Coleridge delightfully. Edward Nicander is pleasing in the rôle of the brother. David Torrence plays the bit of the Inspector very well, and if Vira Stowe had done nothing but her hysterical scene she should deserve a line of praise.

F. Owen Baxter played an English journalist to the life.

The author was called out at the end of the second act, and told the audience that they had really better wait until the end of the play before they commended it. So at the end of the play he was called out again to bow and say his thanks.

There is no love-making in this unusual play, at least not until the very end, and then only two lines.

D. APPLETON & COMPANY, NEW YORK

Was Head of Hoboken Police Department for Thirty-one Years.

Ex-Chief of Police Charles A. Donovan of Hoboken died last Saturday night at Christ Hospital, Jersey City, in his 69th year. He was Chief of Police continuously for thirty-one years. Donovan was born in this city in November, 1840. He was appointed Captain of Police by the Mayor and Council of Hoboken on Sept. 20, 1866, the department then consisting of about a dozen men. In 1871 he was promoted to Chief by a Police Board, and held that place until he was retired on half pay in November, 1902.

During his career as head of the Hoboken police Donovan was an intimate friend of Inspector Williams, Robert Pinkerton, and other well-known detectives, and was associated with them in hunting down criminals when the trail led through New Jersey. One time when an old man disguised as a clergyman was arrested on the river front on suspicion that he was trying to work some confidence game on the newly arrived immigrants, he fooled all the detectives at Police Headquarters, and was just about to be released when Chief Donovan walked in and said to the man:

"Ike, how do you do? I haven't seen you in fifteen years." The supposed clergyman was Ike Vail, one of the smartest confidence men of his time.

Donovan was married in 1872 to a Miss Decker, who died in 1881. His second wife, who survives him, was a Miss Harrison. He left two adopted daughters.

MRS. POTTS DIES ON ARRIVAL.

Rear Admiral's Wife Is Stricken with Apoplexy on the Minnetonka.

Mrs. Robert Potts, wife of Rear Admiral Potts of the navy, died late yesterday afternoon in St. Vincent's Hospital, a few hours after her arrival from London on the Atlantic transport line steamship Minnetonka.

Mrs. Potts was taken with an apoplectic stroke during the voyage, and there was so little hope of her recovery that the last rites of the Catholic Church were administered to her as the vessel came up the bay. The Rear Admiral, his wife, and their daughter arrived on the Minnetonka. Mrs. Potts had been in ill-health for a long time, and the voyage to Europe was made for her benefit. Apparently she was improved by her visit abroad, and when the Minnetonka sailed from London on Aug. 14 Mrs. Potts was in fairly good health.

After luncheon on Monday she suffered an apoplectic stroke and was carried to her room. Though Dr. W. J. Hill, the ship's surgeon, worked night and day over the woman, she did not improve, and on Friday lapsed into an unconscious state, from which she had not recovered when the steamship arrived.

As soon as it was seen that Mrs. Potts's condition was serious, a wireless message was sent to her son, L. I. Potts of the St. George Hotel, Brooklyn, notifying him of his mother's condition, and asking him to meet the liner with a priest. The son went down the bay on the revenue cutter early yesterday morning, accompanied by the Rev. Father Dooley of Fordham University.

Rear Admiral Potts has been on the retired list for some years. His wife was 65 years old. She was formerly a Miss Griffiss.

Mrs. Martha M. Jacobus.

Mrs. Martha M. Jacobus, who was the oldest member of the Orange, N. J., Methodist Church, died yesterday at her home, 524 William Street, where she lived with her niece, Miss Emily Woodruff. Mrs. Jacobus was 86 years old, and had been a widow for sixty-four years. Her husband, Stephen Jacobus, died when she was a bride of eleven months, and she had never again married. "Aunt Martha," as she was called, was born in South Orange. Her ancestor, Samuel Freeman, was one of the earlier settlers, and purchased the tract for his farm from the Indians. Her grandfather was Zenas Freeman, who served throughout the Revolutionary War. Even at her advanced age, Mrs. Jacobus could thread a needle without the aid of eyeglasses.

MOSES THATCHER DEAD.

Ex-Apostle of Mormon Church and Once Candidate for Senator.

SALT LAKE CITY, Aug. 23.—Moses Thatcher, prominent in business and political life of Utah, died at his home in Logan yesterday.

Moses Thatcher was born in Sangamon County, Ill., on Feb. 2, 1846. His parents followed the Mormons to Utah, and Thatcher became a member of the Mormon Church at the age of 15, and soon after was called as a missionary. He was sent to England in 1865, and upon his return, three years later, was made Superintendent of Sunday schools in the Cache stake at Zion.

From 1872 to 1882 Mr. Thatcher represented Cache and Rich Counties in the territorial legislative council, serving at the same time as a member of the Constitutional Congress of 1872. Mr. Thatcher entered in a mercantile partnership with his father at Logan, and their establishment was later absorbed by the Zion's Co-operative Mercantile Institution. After this deal was made young Thatcher became Secretary and later Superintendent of the Utah Northern Railroad, which was built under the direction of Brigham Young.

In 1877 Mr. Thatcher was elected President of the Cache Valley stake of Zion, and in less than two years afterward was chosen an apostle to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Orson Hyde. In this position Mr. Thatcher had a great deal to do with the establishment of Mormon settlements in Mexico, conferring several times with President Diaz.

When the antagonism of the gentile element in Utah was somewhat abated, there was a new alignment among the Mormon people in political matters. The policy of the church leaders was that there should be an even division between the two great political parties. Thatcher chose the Democratic Party. The result was, however, that the majority vote made of Utah a distinctive Republican State, which occasioned a harsh protest from the Democratic State Convention against the church leaders. Mr. Thatcher received the chief blame for this action, and was soon dropped from the rolls of apostles of the Mormon Church. Mr. Thatcher was the Democratic candidate for the United States Senate in 1898, but was defeated by Joseph L. Rawlins.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Rally After Morning Decline—Call Money Rates, 2¼@2½ Per Cent.

GRAIN MARKETS DECLINE

Sharp Break in Cash Wheat at Minneapolis—Indications of Heavy Currency Demand from Northwest.

On a rally which occurred after midday yesterday the stock market recovered a little more than it had lost during the morning, when a sharp decline occurred, extending to as much as a couple of points in some of the active stocks. The afternoon's upward movement was sufficiently pronounced in Union Pacific and in United States Steel and in a few other stocks less conspicuous in the trading to result in net gains of over a point, but in most cases the strength in the afternoon so nearly offset the weakness of the morning that the net changes on either side of the account were restricted to fractions. The volume of trading was considerably lighter than on any day last week, the total for the day falling a round 100,000 shares short of the 1,000,000-share mark, which was exceeded in each of last week's full sessions. All in all, the day's movements on the Stock Exchange left the impression that traders were uncertain of the market's position, with some disposition, however, to anticipate favorable developments in the Harriman properties following the expected arrival here of Mr. Harriman himself, whose condition of health reported from mid-ocean remained yesterday a topic of discussion, despite the feeling very generally expressed that the Stock Exchange had already too long committed the day-to-day fortunes of the stock market to the reported variations in the health of the head of the Union Pacific. But even this factor, which was reflected in an advance of 1¾ points in Union Pacific, was complicated by what appeared to be an effort in the late trading to advance the market at the expense of the short interest left over from last week's trading.

Further reflection of the season's excellent crop outlook was shown in the cereal markets yesterday, which declined here and at the interior. One of the influencing factors in this decline was a very sharp break in the price of cash wheat in Minneapolis, due to large arrivals of new wheat at that market. In this latter connection interest attaches to advices received in important banking quarters from the Northwest that that section will call for a large amount of cash with which to handle this year's yield of the farms. These advices emphasized the fact that New York must be prepared this year, as in the past, to meet large demands for currency, the suggestion that New York will this year escape this demand not being accepted by bankers who have been closely following this year's probable needs in this respect.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23.—The course of the trading on the local board followed in a general way that of the New York list as represented by such arbitrage shares as Reading, United States Steel, and Pennsylvania. Lehigh Valley became active and strong in the afternoon, and the local list was lifted. The industrials scored substantial net gains, and the street railways closed firm.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Traders Wait and Watch.

It is accurate though somewhat trite to say that speculative sentiment is somewhat mixed. Perhaps it would be more accurate to say that it is very much mixed, but possibly it will be clearer before the close of the session this afternoon. Professionals, amateur, and casual traders were apparently at sea yesterday so far as guessing the market is concerned. There was nothing in the news of special significance and the impending arrival of Mr. Harriman acted as a check upon those who were trying to make up their minds as to what position to take. Brokerage houses are very conservative in their advices, simply saying that for the present it is well not to make extended commitments in the market. This adds to the uncertainty. But the market having had somewhat of a setback and then a sudden rally, and further relapse appeals to many traders. Some are optimistically affected and think that prices now might advance without interruption to the original high figures. On the other hand the backing and filling of the last week has inspired some with the idea that lower prices will be recorded. The element of uncertainty makes for a lack of courage in both cases, however.

Good Ticker Knowledge.

Men who read the tape with intelligence asserted soon after the opening yesterday morning that the market did not possess the right kind of an appearance and might be expected to react. In other words it was asserted that there was an element of fictitious strength in the trading. Some of these good tape readers converted their knowledge into cash by selling stocks short soon after the opening, or at least the stocks showing the most insistent upbidding. The subsequent sagging was supposed to be due either to weariness on the part of those who bid up prices, to profit taking by those who saw a chance to realize on stocks bought at the low prices of last week and to professional pressure. Whatever the primary influence the sagging tendency was a little bit pronounced for a short time, but brokers did not apparently benefit very much in commission business from the relatively wide fluctuations in the important issues.

Bonds for the Masses.

There is nothing novel in the theory that money is to be made in the careful selection of bonds which are ultimately to be distributed to small investors. Associations have been formed just for this particular kind of work, the purpose being to analyze the various bond issues, select and determine the most available from every point of view for safe investments and utilize proper advertising and salesmanship to distribute them. Discussing this feature of bond selling the head of a bond house made some comments on investing. "Such a scheme has nothing new in it. Every first-class bond house does precisely that kind of work. We cannot afford to sell bonds that are not specifically what we state them to be. But you will find that it is more difficult to convince the very small investor that he ought to be quite as careful of his security as he is of the return on his money. In fact, it is a question of return that very often decides his investment. Naturally this makes for danger, in that less attention is paid to the security on the bond."

Steel Trade Talk.

Brokers report continued interest in the Steel stocks, dividing their clients into several groups. There are those who have held Steel common, for instance, for many, many months, and who regard it as a permanent investment. They trade, however, in other stocks, always keeping an eye on the Steel issues. There are those who went out of the stock in the panic and came back again when confidence was slowly returning. They are holding their stocks, although they have a substantial profit. Then there is the scalping element, trying to take a point out now and then, and still others, with 32½ to see the Steel stocks because of the theory that they will have more time to jump if the market begins to go against them. Naturally it behooves the broker to keep up his information on the condition of the steel trade. That is easy enough at the quarterly dividend period, but in the meantime the newspapers are scanned thoroughly for accounts which will help to formulate opinions as to the trend of the steel business.

FOREIGN TRADE OPPORTUNITIES.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Monday.

Floor traders on the Consolidated Exchange offered stocks freely in the early trading, and prices at that time, as a rule, were relatively lower than those on the Stock Exchange. Covering of shorts on the later decline resulted in relative firmness, and brought the market to a strong closing. Trading was active, with the sales approximating 117,000 shares, distributed among sixty-two different issues. United States Steel common was the leader in respect to volume, Union Pacific second, and Reading third.

CABLE WAR NOW HAS WIDER SCOPE

Newfoundland Gets an Ally in Rival to the Commercial Cable Company.

APPEAL MADE TO ENGLAND

Anglo-American Wants Agreement Repudiated — Commercial Says It Would Re-establish Monopoly.

The trouble between the Commercial Cable Company and the Newfoundland Government has apparently assumed international importance. The Commercial Cable Company recently sought to fight out its battle directly with Premier Morris of Newfoundland, but now the Anglo-American Telegraph Company, which lands in Newfoundland, has joined forces with the Premier by writing to the British Colonial Office in London. The Commercial Cable Company, therefore, has two opponents.

The issue is whether the Newfoundland Government has the right to repudiate a legal agreement on the faith of which over a million dollars has been expended by an American corporation. The Anglo-American Telegraph Company, according to the Commercial Company, is trying to inject another issue into the controversy, namely, whether it shall hereafter have a monopoly of the Newfoundland business, as it had for fifty years.

The Commercial Cable Company's present trouble is with the new Administration of Newfoundland, headed by Sir Edward P. Morris, as Premier, which was in opposition to Sir Robert Bond and which succeeded in the election which took place a few weeks ago. The new Administration repudiated the Commercial's contract. Thereupon the Commercial Cable Company wrote a letter of protest to Sir Edward P. Morris, and Sir Edward, who is in London, made an answer.

The Anglo-American Telegraph Company, a British corporation operating cables between Great Britain and the United States in competition with the Commercial Cable Company, has now joined in the controversy, writing a letter to the British Colonial Secretary, to the effect that the contract should not be observed.

Addressing the British Secretary of State for the Colonies under date of Aug. 20, General Manager George Gray Ward of the Commercial Company writes in reply to the contentions of the Anglo-American Company:

> The Anglo-American Telegraph Company, in its letter to you, says that this contract is unfair and prejudicial to them, and creates a monopoly. That is a remarkable statement, indeed. So far from our contract being a monopoly, it was made solely to break up a monopoly which the Anglo-American Telegraph Company had for fifty years, to the detriment of business interests, and which it would continue to have were it not for the Commercial Cable Company. If the Commercial Cable Company were to sever its connections with the Newfoundland Government, its monopoly of the Anglo-American Telegraph Company would be restored, and that seems to be the policy of the present Newfoundland Government, although the Anglo-American Telegraph Company, by keeping other companies out of Newfoundland, for fifty years deprived that country of a large revenue from those companies.
>
> As to the twenty-five-year agreement of the Newfoundland Government to exchange business with us, under which we receive a reduced toll, with whom would the Government exchange this cable business if not with us? It certainly could not consistently exchange business with the Anglo-American Telegraph Company, because the Anglo-American Telegraph Company competes with the Newfoundland Government, and hence would decline to forego any such portion of its tolls as we do, and for the Government to transfer its messages to the Anglo-American Telegraph Company would be to re-establish the monopoly that existed before the Commercial Cable Company connected with Newfoundland.
>
> The Anglo-American Telegraph Company in its letter to you also states that we are practically exempt from taxation in Newfoundland by our contract. They could not have read the contract carefully. The contract obligates us to pay $4,000 per year for every cable which we run through Newfoundland.

SOLD ADULTERATED FOOD.

Meat and Milk Dealers Fined $25 and $50 in Special Sessions.

William Somer, a restaurant keeper at 101 Third Avenue, was fined $25 yesterday in Special Sessions for preserving the chopped meat which he sold to his customers with sulphurous acid. The complaint was made by Inspector A. A. Birk of the Health Department.

Another offender was Frank McGahon of 12 State Street, the keeper of a stand in Battery Park, who was arrested on July 2 by Inspector Charles F. Walters for selling adulterated milk to people going to and from the boats. He was fined $50 yesterday in Special Sessions.

THE FOREIGN MARKETS.

Harriman Issues Advance on the London Exchange.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Money was easy on the market to-day, and discounts were firm owing to the Continent securing the $1,750,000 in gold available.

Trading on the Stock Exchange was quiet, business being chiefly concerned with the settlement, which has commenced in mining shares. Business for new account was confined to copper shares and Russian and Japanese bonds. Grand Trunk was dearer, and home securities were neglected.

American securities opened strong and generally well over parity, with the Harriman issues the leaders in the advance.

At noon Union Pacific was 2 points and New York Central 1 point higher, while the rest of the list ranged from ⅜ above to ⅜ below Saturday's New York closing. The Wall Street opening came weak and caused a drop of one point in the leading stocks, and the market finished weak at about the lowest quotations for the day.

Bar silver quiet at 23½d per ounce.

PARIS, Aug. 23.—Prices on the Bourse to-day were firm.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—The stock market was quiet, and even the Coppers, which have been active lately, were neglected to-day. North Butte was sold in small lots and went down more than a point; Amalgamated and Lake also were heavy, but they did not change much. There was some buying of Telephone.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

West 26th Street Building Leased for Long Term—Another Sale in Lenox Library Block—Day's Results at Auction.

M. & L. Hess have leased, for Edgar Lehman to M. A. Steinberg the property 25 and 27 West Twenty-sixth Street, for fifteen years, at an aggregate rental of about $250,000. The building on the site, now five stories high, will be remodeled, and have two stories added to it. It will be ready for occupancy about Jan. 1. Plans for the alterations, which will cost $40,000, were filed yesterday.

Another Deal in Library Block.

The New York Public Library is reported to have sold another parcel in the Lenox Library block—a lot on the south side of Seventy-first Street, west of Madison Avenue, 23 by 100.5. The new owner, it is said, will build a residence on the site.

Estate Sells on 34th Street.

The Rupp estate has sold 406 West Thirty-fourth Street, a three-story building on lot 20 by 98.9, eighty feet west of Ninth Avenue.

John J. Clancy & Co., in conjunction with S. B. Goodale & Son, have leased for Martin F. Huberth to Thomas J. Burton, for a term of years, 327 West Fifty-eighth Street, a four-story dwelling.

Julius Friend was the broker in the sale of 12 and 14 West Twenty-seventh Street for the Solomon Loeb estate to Charles Kaye.

Only Five Transfers Yesterday.

The recent low record of nine transfers for a day's business at the Register's Office was eclipsed yesterday when only five conveyances of real estate in Manhattan and the Bronx were recorded.

Addition to Babies' Hospital.

The Babies' Hospital, at the northeast corner of Lexington Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street, is to have built an extension, 20 by 48 feet, adjoining the present structure on its northerly side and covering the lot known as 661 Lexington Avenue. York & Sawyer, who filed the plans for the new building yesterday, estimate its cost at $50,000.

Leases in Broadway Buildings.

Leonard J. Muhlfelder leased for Alfred Baer 10,000 square feet in 584 and 586 Broadway; also, for Mutual Real Estate Company, 10,000 square feet, in 616 and 618 Broadway; also, in conjunction with Tucker, Speyers & Co., 5,000 square feet, in 57 and 59 East Eleventh Street.

William R. Mason has leased the Marie Necke, the dwelling 240 West Thirty-sixth Street.

Builder Sells Bronx Dwelling.

William Peters & Co. have sold for Delphine Gamache to Paul Preschel the two-family house 1,739 Taylor Avenue, Van Nest.

S. Albert negotiated the recent sale of fourteen lots on the east side of Coster Street, 200 feet south of Spofford Avenue, for the Henry Morgenthau Company, to Henry J. Feiser and Joseph Schwartz. The property will be taken over by the Feiser Realty and Construction Company for improvement with two-family dwellings.

Sales of Staten Island Properties.

The Prince's Bay Realty Company has sold for Susan A. Sprague her homestead at Prince's Bay, Staten Island; also, a large plot of ground on Amboy Road and Bayview Avenue.

Contracts for New Structures.

The Thompson-Starrett Company has secured the following construction contracts: A 14-story apartment house, at Sixty-first Street and Park Avenue; a 12-story office building, at 123 to 133 William Street; a 12-story loft building, at Broadway and Fourth Street; a 15-story bank and office building for the Old National Bank of Spokane, Wash.; a warehouse in Seattle, Wash., for the American Steel & Wire Co.; a 10-story office building for the People's Natural Gas Company, in Pittsburg, Penn.; an annex to the dry goods store building of the Bee Company, Omaha, Neb.; alterations to residence of Morgan J. O'Brien, in this city, and a residence for L. S. Sadler, at Carlisle, Penn.

Concerning this new business, an officer of the Thompson-Starrett Company said yesterday: "The indications are that this company's work on hand will shortly pass the $20,000,000 mark. Such figures, and the continued favorable outlook for additional business, would seem to justify the statement that the recovery of the building industry from the stagnation of a year or so ago is complete."

450 ACRES OF LAND ON NARRAGANSETT BAY

With two and one-quarter miles of shore front

To be sold in TWO PARCELS

at Steamboat Landing of the Providence, Fall River & Newport Steamboat Co.

Conanicut Park, Town of Jamestown, Conanicut Island, R. I.

PARCEL NO. 1 comprises the property known as CONANICUT PARK and contains 1,579 building lots, mostly 50 x 100 feet each. With streets, parks, unplatted land. In all about 385 acres of land with about two miles of shore front, with riparian rights, water system, waiting station and two houses.

PARCEL NO. 2. FARM of about 67 acres of land, adjoining parcel No. 1 on the south. High land overlooking the water on both sides of the island. Level and ready for platting into sites for Summer homes.

CONANICUT PARK is in the Town of Jamestown and comprises the entire northern end of the Island of Conanicut, which is situated in Narragansett Bay, between Newport and the Island of Rhode Island on the east and the mainland of Rhode Island on the west. The island is about nine miles long and separates the bay into the east and west passages. On the island are located the Summer Homes of many people from all sections of the United States. The view from the Park, which includes a view of the City of Newport, Wickford, and Hope, Patience, Gould and Dutch Islands, comprises a marine landscape of unusual beauty. From the higher parts of the Park practically all of Narragansett Bay can be seen. All of the water traffic entering and leaving Narragansett Bay passes within sight of this property. Newport Harbor and Dutch Island Harbor are the favorite rendezvous of the United States Navy vessels, the naval vessels of foreign countries, the New York Yacht Club fleet, and the pleasure craft of the entire Atlantic seaboard. The waters of the bay furnish unsurpassed facilities for bathing, yachting, and fishing. The air is pure, soft, and restful, making Conanicut Park an ideal location for Summer homes.

The property is offered in two parcels, large enough to enable an investor to devote his time and thought to its development and insuring him a handsome return.

The property must be sold. An absolute sale to the highest bidder. Two-thirds of the purchase price may remain on mortgage.

A special steamer will leave Newport on Day of Sale.

HELPING THE POOR BACK TO THE LAND

Bolton Hall Raising a $70,000 Fund to Establish a Training School for Farmers.

HOW IT'S DONE IN GERMANY

Vacant Lots Bought by Cities and Rented to Needy Families—Gardens for 50,000 Children, Too.

Bolton Hall, the author and land reformer, returned on Saturday from Europe, where he had been studying conditions in France, Germany, and Switzerland to help him in his "back-to-the-land" movement which he started in New York through the Vacant Lot Gardening Association about three years ago.

"The most interesting and significant situation," Mr. Hall said, "I found in Germany, where the city authorities are helping workingmen's families to spend the Summer on vacant lands near the city limits.

"More than 50,000 children," Mr. Hall explained, "were enabled by the authorities of Berlin to spend this Summer on land within easy reach of the city, where they were assigned to plots on which to put up their own little booths, where they could play and cultivate gardening profitably with the help of their parents and the advice of public instructors.

"In the smaller cities of Germany the effort is principally directed to help the families of wage earners, as, for instance, in Goettingen, where the city has acquired 10,000 acres and is renting them out to deserving families at 25 marks for one-third of an acre. This sum pays the rent for fifteen years, and the city tenant has five years to pay it in. I remember one case in particular in which an old man was supporting himself in this way, with his two grandchildren, 3 and 5 years, respectively.

"Near Paris I studied with the greatest interest the intensive gardening which is done there by professional gardeners on little bits of farms. Many of these rent at $250 an acre per year. They are roofed over with glass and very profitable. We can apply this system of intensive gardening with great advantage here, because our climate can dispense with the glass roofing.

"We expect to get busy right away with our work here," continued Mr. Hall. "The Little Land League, which I was instrumental in organizing before I left for Europe about four months ago, has about 200 members now, and the number keeps on increasing every day. This league has superseded the Vacant Lot Gardening Association, which conducted a number of experiments in and near New York during its existence.

"In the Spring of 1908 we were obliged to give up the thirty acres of land on Bronxdale Avenue, near White Plains Road, which the Astor estate had allowed us to use and on which a number of families had been living. In vain we tried to get other cultivatable land within a 5-cent limit of the city, and finally found a small piece of land at Dyckman Street, near Prescott Avenue, which the owner, a Mr. W. F. Burns, had allowed the association to use.

"This land, however, was not suitable for cultivation, but was excellent for tenting; there was not space enough for more than half a dozen tents; but it seemed better to help half a dozen families to live a natural, healthful life and to keep them off the charity lists, than to allow even this small space to be unoccupied during the hot Summer months.

"Accordingly lumber was bought for platforms, water-proof tents were put up, and worthy applicants most in need were selected. These families have lived there all through the Winter, too, without suffering from the cold.

"Our experience has shown us how difficult it is to get land near the city to be used, free of charge, for vacant lot gardening. Real estate men and owners do not want to be bothered. It was this obstacle which led to the formation of the Little Land League.

"We shall endeavor to raise a fund of about $70,000 for our purposes and get a small piece of land within an hour and a half of New York. This we shall use as a test and training school, and the people who have proved capable there we shall put on their feet as farmers on a larger tract of land further away."

The officers of the league, whose headquarters are at 56 Pine Street, report having received many applicants—some desirous of enough land to start small farming, others compelled to come into the city for their daily work, but glad of a chance to live away from it. The league hopes in time to spread its work around large cities other than New York, as applications from all over the United States show the need for this aid.

The officers and the general committee of the Little Land League are P. Tecumseh Sherman, President; Kate Sanborn, Vice President; Bolton Hall, Treasurer; E. M. Freye, Secretary; Poultney Bigelow, R. Fulton Cutting, Robert W. De Forest, Hamlin Garland, C. B. Hopkins, W. Lloyd Garrison, Seth Low, V. Everitt Macy, Hamilton Holt, J. Pierpont Morgan, John Moody, N. O. Nelson, Mrs. Frederick Nathan, George Foster Peabody, L. Rudy, George T. Powell, E. R. A. Seligman, Charles Sprague Smith, Albert Shaw, Spencer Trask, Francis L. Stetson, Booker T. KEPT THEIR WEDDING SECRET.

Miss Grace Shawcross and H. W. Smith Were Married on June 26.

The friends of Miss Grace Mae Shawcross, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Shawcross of 24 Lake Street, Bloomfield, N. J., were surprised yesterday when it became known that she has been the wife of Herbert W. Smith of Orange since June 26 last.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Otho F. Humphreys, rector of the Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, West Orange, and the young bride and her husband imposed a promise upon the minister to keep the marriage a secret.

The parents of the bride, when they learned of the marriage last night, promptly gave their forgiveness.

WORE HALF A DOZEN SUITS.

Bowery Character's Bulbous Raiment Too Much for a New Policeman.

Patrolman David Spero was recently transferred to the Eldridge Street Station. He had never seen Barnett Bordin, although Bordin, who is 55 years old, has been a familiar figure in the neighborhood of Chrystie, Grand, and Broome Streets for years. When Spero saw the old man on the Bowery near Broome Street yesterday, clad in a half dozen suits of clothes, some of them hanging in rags below his outer coat, and surrounded by a crowd of curious people, the policeman took him to the Essex Market Court.

Spero told the clerks at the court that he thought Bordin ought to be charged with disorderly conduct in causing a crowd to collect. They refused to make such complaint against him and the case was referred to Magistrate Butts. Bordin was brought before the Magistrate. He had on the half dozen different suits of clothes, which, bulging out from his rotund person, made him look like a big barrel. He had on a white helmet and was perspiring profusely.

Lieut. Hackett, in charge of the court squad, told the Magistrate he had known Bordin for fifteen years, that he worked every day, never did any one harm, and that it was only an eccentricity that he wore so many clothes. Clerk Schwartz had known him for twelve years and had never known him to be disorderly or give anybody trouble. One of the foreman of the factory of the Greenpoint Metallic Bed Company at 133 Chrystie Street said Bordin was employed in their factory and said he was a good workman.

Magistrate Butts asked why the man wore so much clothing. The foreman said he understood that Bordin had formerly been wealthy, but returned home one night to find that everything had been stolen from him by a relative he trusted. Since then he had persisted in taking everything he possessed with him wherever he went. The pockets of his coats were filled with various articles to bear out the foreman's statement.

The old man was discharged.

Brooklyn Y. C. Races Open To-day.

The Brooklyn Yacht Club's race week will open this morning with a twenty-six nautical mile race to the Scotland Lightship and back. The entries in the hands of the Regatta Committee last night included in schooners L. J. Callanan's Eclipse and Commodore W. C. Towen's Tammany; in sloops, Rear Commodore Leo S. The boats are required to round West Bank Light and the South West Spit Buoys. The committee has made a time limit of seven hours for the race. In the afternoon the smaller classes will start their series of contests over the usual Gravesend Bay courses. On Wednesday the racing features will be confined to power boats, the chief event being a race around Staten Island, about thirty-three nautical miles.

IN NEW JERSEY.

In Jersey City yesterday Patrick Pierce, 14 years old, of 267 Thirteenth Street, had three fingers of his left hand and two of the right hand blown off when a dynamite shell that he found in an open lot and picked with a needle exploded. He was taken to St. Francis's Hospital. Several boys were with him, and warned him against tampering with the shell. But he said that he wasn't afraid, and was going to find out what was inside.

The Jersey City police learned yesterday that the apartments of Ernest J. Hepheimer, President of the Colonial Life Insurance Company of New Jersey, at 1 Summit Avenue, had been robbed, the thieves getting away with $340 worth of jewelry, including a diamond horseshoe scarf pin valued at $200 and a gold handled penknife worth $10. The theft was committed some time Sunday afternoon in the absence of Mr. Hepheimer.

At a meeting of the Essex County Democratic Committee in Newark last night John Berry was indorsed as a candidate for nomination for Surrogate at the September primaries. County Chairman Tyler Parmley presided, and there were 160 members present. Resolutions were adopted which are to take the place of the party platforms announced at conventions in previous years.

One man was killed and two seriously hurt in Newark yesterday afternoon as the result of the collapse of a derrick in the yards of the Hedden Construction Company at Madison Street and the Passaic River. Condon Colwig of 36 Cortlandt Street was the man killed, while the injured were Rossi Tirena of 140 Bruce Street and James Nick of 12 Cutler Street.

Pedestrians on Badger Avenue, Newark, yesterday morning had their attention attracted by a man who was seated on a large stone in a vacant lot, gazing intently at his wrists, which he held in front of him. One person, more curious than the others approached him and found that the man had severed the arteries of both arms and was watching himself bleed to death. He was taken to the City Hospital and died there. He was David Hellniegel, 59 years old, a teamster out of work.

John J. Morpau, who says he is a full-blooded Sioux Indian, is under arrest in Newark. It is alleged he confessed to having stolen two horses valued at $550, afterward selling them for $15 each. The arrest followed that of Olin Woodruff, a trainer, at the driving meet of the New Jersey Road Horse Association at Weequahic Park on Saturday, for having the two horses in his possession. They were taken from the pastures of Alonzo Fox, a Newark horse dealer, on the outskirts of that city, Friday night.

John Po'inis, 5 years old, of 83 Bond Street, Elizabeth, fell through a hole in the dock at Pier 7, Staten Island Sound, yesterday afternoon, and was drowned. John Daly of 135 Clark Place, and John Lucas of 144 Insley Place, while scalping for crabs, recovered the body.

The Orange police have sent out an alarm for James O'Connor, 15 years old, of 267 Watchung Avenue, Orange. His father says he ran away for fear he would be whipped.

South Orange will have a tax rate this year of $1.60 on $100 valuation. Last year the rate was $1.47.

H. T. McLean, who signs himself "M. D.," was arrested at Englewood yesterday by County Detective W. V. A. Blauvelt of Hackensack, charged with practicing medicine without a license. In default of $500 bail Dr. McLean was locked up in the Hackensack jail.

Thomas Conlon, 30 years of age, of Hunterdon Street, Newark, lost his life at Montclair yesterday, when a team of horses drawing a wagon he was in ran away. As Conlon leaped out one of his feet caught and he fell on his head and fractured his skull. He died later in the Mountainside Hospital.

Mrs. James Brewer of Lafayette lies at the point of death at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Albert Bond, at Hamburg, a victim of an automobile accident. Her skull is fractured and she is badly injured internally. She was injured on Saturday afternoon, when an automobile in which were Charles Montross of Hardystown, his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Brewer, their daughter, Mrs. Bond, her young child, and Coe Montross, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Montross, upset at Greenspot.

Through the prompt action of a 16-year-old boy, Elizabeth Lynn, the 2-year-old daughter of James Lynn of Wood Avenue, Tottenville, S. I., was saved from drowning yesterday. The rescuer was Henry Wiener of Perth Amboy, son of the engineer of the ferryboat plying between that place and Tottenville. The girl fell from the boat and young Wiener leaped after her and brought her to the bridge of the slip, where they were hauled in.

Canadian Cricketers Lead.

MONTREAL, Aug. 23.—The United States cricketers could do little against the bowling of the Canadians in the annual three-day international cricket match started here today, and were all out in the first inning for 85, having previously dismissed the Canadian batting side for 156. The Americans thus go into the second inning 71 runs behind.

INVADERS IN GRAY TO TAKE SEVEN TOWNS

PEACE COMES ON SATURDAY

Special to The New York Times.

CENTRAL VALLEY, N. Y., Aug. 23.—This quiet little village, it became known late this afternoon, will be captured unopposed by the West Point Cadets at daylight to-morrow morning. The corps of cadets, under command of Lieut. Col. Frederick W. Sibley, Fourth United States Cavalry, left West Point yesterday afternoon to begin a week's march through Orange County. During this march no less than seven Orange villages are destined to be invested by the youngsters in gray.

There are about 500 cadets in the invading army, which is divided into cavalry, infantry, artillery, signal and engineering corps, all under command of officers from the regular army. To-night the army is encamped, according to a milkman who passed through Central Valley shortly before sundown, on the shores of Mine Lake, about ten miles distant, which they reached about 3:30 o'clock this afternoon.

The march through Orange County was undertaken by command of Col. Hugh L. Scott, the Superintendent of the United States Military Academy, and will last until some time next Saturday, when Fort Montgomery will be reached. Immediately after the investment of that place, the cadets will head for their home on the Hudson. The manoeuvres are to be as complete as the limited time will permit, and before the week is ended several battles will have been fought, and many problems of attack and defense worked out, the cadets, when necessary being divided into opposing armies.

The first engagement took place this afternoon near Mine Lake, where a hard rear guard and advance action was fought. The victorious force was not announced by the umpires.

Besides Central Valley it is known that the following towns are down for investment before the week is over: Cromwell Lake, Monroe, Round Pond, Arden, Queensboro, and Fort Montgomery. On Wednesday a flank guard action and the attack of a convoy train will be the basis of the problem; Thursday a difficult pass will be attacked, while the problems on Friday and Saturday will involve the attack and defense of strong positions.

The instruction in engineering will be limited to members of the first class, the principal work being photography and map making. The officers in charge of this work will be Capt. William P. Wooten, First Lieuts. Marke Brooke, H. C. Fiske, Julian L. Schley, Owen G. Collins, and Pelham D. Glassford, and Second Lieut. E. Frederick W. Manley, all of the Corps of Engineers, U. S. A.

The officers commanding the corps and under whose direction the problems are to be worked out are in addition to Col. Sibley, Capts. Oscar J. Charles, Seventeenth Infantry; Isaac Newell, Twenty-second Infantry; Charles P. Summerall, Second Field Artillery; Guy V. Henry, Twelfth Cavalry; John D. Long, Twelfth Cavalry; Alfred A. Maybach, Coast Artillery Corps; First Lieuts. Edward H. De Armond, Sixth Field Artillery; Francis H. Farnum, Twenty-fourth Infantry; Benjamin E. Grey, Twenty-first Infantry, and Second Lieut. E. Llewellyn Bull, Twenty-second Infantry.

CITY BREVITIES.

In the hope of saving the youthful offenders who are brought before the Children's Court from the stigma of being branded as criminals, the Erkin Juvenile Delinquent bill will go into effect on Sept. 1. The bill provides for an amendment to the Penal Code which classifies all acts committed between the ages of seven and sixteen years as "juvenile delinquencies," except acts punishable by death or life imprisonment.

At 10 o'clock to-morrow John N. Bogart, Commissioner of Licenses, will inquire into charges against the March Labor Agency—March being Republican Leader of the Third Assembly District. The complaint is made by John H. Mooney of 54 Oliver Street, who alleges that he was induced by the agency to go to a railroad track job in Pennsylvania on July 27 under false representations.

Grace Maidhoff, the young California girl who pleaded guilty last week in General Sessions to an indictment charging forgery, was arraigned yesterday in Special Sessions to answer the charge of petit larceny, on which she was originally arrested before her graver offences were discovered. In view of her former plea of guilty, she was released on her own recognizance and returned to the Tombs, where she is awaiting sentence.

The report of the appraisal of the estate of William B. Pearce of Providence, R. I., who died in that city on May 10, was filed with the Surrogate here yesterday. The estate is stated to be worth $170,800. The major portion of it goes to his brother, Henry Pearce.

The strikes of the neckwear workers for higher wages and recognition of the union were extended yesterday to the shops of Bollock & Glasbery, 11 Waverley Place, and Samuel Rappaport, 43 East Tenth Street. The Neckwear Makers' Union has also decided to order strikes in Rochester, N. Y., Passaic, N. J., and Philadelphia.

Supreme Court Justice Amend signed an order yesterday giving permission to Judge Franklin Sealey to file papers of Lawyer Bartow S. Weeks, who lives at 240 West Seventy-third Street, to change his name after Sept. 27 to Richard Franklin Weeks.

Mrs. Isabelle Louise Wilmerding, through her counsel, applied to the Surrogate yesterday for letters of administration on the estate of her husband, Gustav L. Wilmerding, son of the late Charles H. Wilmerding, who died at Block Island, R. I., on Aug. 9. The petition states that there is no real property, and the personal estate is $100.

The Public Service Commission yesterday directed the New York, Westchester & Boston Railway Company and the New York & Port Chester Railroad, both subsidiaries of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, to report to the commission on the operation and financial condition of the Port Chester road, which, merged with the Westchester line, is constructing a route down through Westchester County and the Bronx to the Harlem River station of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.

DROWNS TRYING TO SAVE BOY.

Three Rescues Already to Modest Longshoreman's Credit.

John McDonald, believed by the police to have been the mysterious longshoreman who made several rescues of boys from the North River this month, was drowned last evening while trying to save 12-year-old Robert Lee from the river near the foot of West Twenty-eighth Street. The lad, who lives at 216 West Twenty-fifth Street, was saved by James Flanagan, 17 years old, of 228 West Forty-third Street, after McDonald was drowned.

On three occasions recently an unknown stevedore has jumped into the river from the piers at Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth Streets and saved a lad from drowning each time. He invariably disappeared after handing the rescued boy over to hospital doctors or the police. All effort to locate or learn the identity of the rescuer proved fruitless.

Last night young Lee and other lads were fishing out driftwood near the pier. Suddenly Lee lost his balance and fell. A longshoreman threw off his blouse and dived after him. This man, afterward proved to have been McDonald, never rose to the surface. It is thought he struck his head upon a log.

Young Flanagan, realizing that something had happened to McDonald, jumped in and rescued Lee. John McGovern, 13 years old, of 532 West Twenty-ninth Street, helped Flanagan to lift Lee to the pier.

Two hours later John McGrath of 354 Tenth Avenue recovered the body of McDonald by grappling. His home was in Thirty-third Street, between Ninth and Tenth Avenues.

SMALL DENTIST FEARS WIFE.

Gets Injunction Stopping Her "Physical Interference" with Him.

James George Jennings of 300 West 113th Street, a five-foot dentist, is afraid of Mary Elizabeth Jennings, his wife, who is described as 5 feet 8 inches tall with appropriate weight. And she does not feel easy in his presence, according to the court papers, for their fears have brought the case into court. The small husband has got a temporary injunction restraining his wife from interfering with him physically when he tries to enter his dental office and home.

George Robinson, his lawyer, appeared before Justice Giegerich yesterday to ask that this injunction be made permanent, and also to plead for a separation. Isidor Klatzkie, Mrs. Jennings's attorney, was there to ask that the wife be allowed $20 a week alimony and $100 counsel fees. Both motions were adjourned.

Mr. and Mrs. Jennings have been married since Dec. 17, 1895, and have a six-year-old daughter. He has a dental office at 300 West 113th Street, where he lives, and another at Port Chester. His income is between $200 and $500 a month, his wife declares. For three or four years Mrs. Jennings has been abusing her husband frightfully, he asserts in his petition, sometimes grieving aloud that she had not given him a slow poison long ago and mourning significantly that his life insurance was not larger.

On July 10, he asserts, she hurled a fork at him, which lacerated his face terribly in the neighborhood of one of his eyes, and put him in such fear that he had papers prepared in a separation suit. The papers were served on Mrs. Jennings the next day, which so angered her that when he went back to his home on July 15 to get some dental instruments and clothes she drove him from the house. Then he got the injunction.

Mrs. Jennings's story as contained in her papers is quite different from that of her small husband. For four years, she declares, he has been addicted to the drink and other vicious habits; has attempted to strike her and has called her bad names; and on July 10, the very day to which the husband assigns the fork incident, she "adroitly escaped" a beating which he evidently intended to give her, or to try to give her. The separation suit of her husband she attributes to his desire to escape from his marital responsibilities.

Murphy Makes Record Haul.

AVALON, Cal., Aug. 23.—L. G. Murphy, the holder of the world's record for black sea bass angling, yesterday made another remarkable world's record by bringing a 118-pound blue-fin tuna to gaff in fifteen minutes. The reason given for this phenomenal angling was that on the first leap of the monster fish the line became wound about the fish and materially aided the angler.

GOT BRIDE'S $13,000, THEN DISAPPEARED

Mrs. Lynch Doesn't Want Keeler to Come Back, but Asks the Police to Catch Him.

WEDDED ON SHORT NOTICE

Met in July and He Lay Siege to Her Affections Through Her Little Grandson.

Mrs. W. E. Lynch, as she now prefers to call herself, who lives at 24 Vernon Avenue, Brooklyn, through her lawyer, Charles Pope Caldwell of 42 Broadway, has asked the police to try to locate H. Bradley Keeler, to whom she was married on July 13. She says he dropped out of sight a few days later, carrying with him $18,000, practically all the money she had in the world. He said he was the owner of a mine of amethysts in Ansonata, Mexico.

Mrs. Lynch, 49 years old and a widow of eighteen months, lives with her only child, a grown son. With her little grandson she was staying at the Saxonhurst Hotel, Ocean Grove, N. J., early in July.

"There came to that hotel a distinguished-looking man who said he was Harry B. Keeler," said Mr. Caldwell yesterday. "He said later that he and his sister, C. E. Keeler, had tried to get accommodations at the West End Hotel, but that it had room for the sister only. On that account he took a room temporarily at the Saxonhurst. It happened that his room was near Mrs. Lynch's.

"Mr. Keeler began to pay attention to her little grandson, and through him got to talking with Mrs. Lynch. Thus was the acquaintanceship established, and the sister was introduced. Mr. Keeler said he was 50 years old.

"It was on July 2 that Mrs. Lynch first talked with Mr. Keeler. On July 6 she left Ocean Grove for Brooklyn, mentioning to her new-found acquaintances, however, that she intended to go to the Adirondacks for a while. On July 7 Mrs. Lynch received a telephone message from Mr. Keeler, who said he was at the Gilsey House. He asked if his sister might not accompany Mrs. Lynch to the mountains.

"Mrs. Lynch was willing, and so it came about that the three of them went to Lake George. Keeler had meanwhile begun to make proposals of marriage to Mrs. Lynch.

"On July 13 Mr. Keeler and Mrs. Lynch went to Glens Falls and were married by a rector. The marriage was kept a secret, so Mr. Keeler declared, from his sister. Mrs. Lynch noticed that when he was answering the questions of the County Clerk he stammered and hesitated, but this he explained by saying the points had been out of his mind for a long time. His father, he said, was Norman Keeler of Fairport, N. Y., and his mother was Marion Peets of Castile, N. Y.

"The next day the couple returned to New York, and then went to Mrs. Lynch's home at 24 Vernon Avenue, Brooklyn. Mr. Keeler objected to living in Mrs. Lynch's house.

"By this time Mr. Keeler had found that his wife had some $10,000 worth of first mortgages drawing 4 and 5 per cent. interest, some Brooklyn Union League stock, and some money in the bank, according to her book. At this time he suggested that they go to live either in San Diego or Los Angeles, Cal., where he could be near his amethyst mine, and where, too, her money could be put out at from 8 to 12 per cent.

"She agreed to go to California. He sold her bonds, drew her money out of the bank, and kept it, though she was then quite willing that he do so. About that time he showed his wife a letter purporting to come from his sister in which 'C. E. Keeler' upbraided him for marrying an 'adventuress,' who only wanted his vast wealth. In his wife's presence he tore up this letter—an act which made a deep impression on her.

"She packed up her things, and bade her friends good-bye. On July 31 he and she crossed to Manhattan to go to the Grand Central Station. On the way he said to his wife that he might have some mail at the Gilsey House. Asking her to wait for him, he went away, returning presently with two telegrams. One of them was on a form of the Western Union Telegraph Office at 313 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, and read:

Most important you see me Sunday morning. Deal certain. C. E. HARPER.

"The other, which Mrs. Lynch did not see fully, referred to a date for Monday. Mrs. Lynch now says she is sure the handwriting of the telegram form was that of Mr. Keeler himself. At Keeler's suggestion Mrs. Keeler went to Boston, he promising to follow in a day or so. He gave to her $75 out of a big roll of bills. She has not heard from him since. A letter sent to Ansonata, Mexico, has been returned as insufficient in address. She also learned he never stopped at the Gilsey House.

WHEAT STALKS SIX FEET LONG

Railway Immigration Agent Tells of Farming Methods of Southwest.

Arthur P. Cutter, traveling immigration agent of the Rock Island Railway lines, was on the streets of Manhattan yesterday with a sheaf of wheat stalks six feet long. He is talking up Colorado, Texas, and the Southwest generally, and he brings with him, beside the huge sheaf of wheat, news about the dry-farming method in use in the Southwest.

It was land cultivated according to the dry-farming method on which his sample wheat was grown, and it is expected that the method will bring into use a great deal of dry land which has hitherto been supposed to be worthless on account of lack of rainfall. The dry-farming method, briefly, is plowing deep. This method is being taken up now in the so-called dry lands extending from Western and Southwestern Texas to the foothills of the Rockies, says Mr. Cutter.

"New York's title to the Empire State is not to last long," he declares. "Texas has lower taxes than any other State, more coal and oil than Pennsylvania, more iron than Alabama, more granite than New Hampshire, more lignite and koaline than all Europe, more timber land than Michigan, more fruit land than California, more corn land than Illinois, more cotton land than any other State, more miles of railway than any other State, and is building more every year than any other State."

ENJOINS A TWO-CENT FARE.

West Virginia Court Holds Law Affecting Trolley Road Confiscatory.

CHARLESTON, West Va., Aug. 23.—Judge Burdette in the Circuit Court today issued an injunction restraining the State and county officials from enforcing the two-cent fare law against the Norfolk & Western Railroad. The court holds the law is unconstitutional and is confiscatory on its face.

The court's order requires the road to issue coupons with three-cent fare tickets for the excess over two cents a mile collected until a test case pending in the State Supreme Court is decided.

TO HEAR FURLONG CHARGES.

Prosecutor Takes the Case to Justice Crane—Magistrate Again on the Bench

The Brooklyn District Attorney's investigation into the official acts of Magistrate Henry E. Furlong of the Gates Avenue Court, Brooklyn, was carried forward yesterday when Supreme Court Justice Crane decided to sit as a Magistrate to hear the testimony in connection with the case. The hearings will begin to-morrow or Thursday.

Assistant District Attorney Elder yesterday morning had a conference with Charles J. McDermott, Chairman of the Grievance Committee of the Bar Association, during which important witnesses in connection with the alleged charges against Magistrate Furlong contained in the confession made by Jacob W. Gotthelf, now in Raymond Street Jail, were called in. Gotthelf, Mrs. Gotthelf, and her sister, Mrs. Fannie Arnstein, and Gotthelf's counsel, E. J. Reilly, were present. The entire party then went before Justice Crane in Chambers. While Gotthelf is in jail awaiting trial on an indictment charging him with bribery, his former employer, R. W. Katham, is in Sing Sing for bribery in connection with the case of Louis Wolf, the East New York rug manufacturer and self-confessed pickpocket. It was intimated that Kathan may be brought here as a witness in the Furlong investigation.

Magistrate Furlong appeared in the Gates Avenue Court yesterday for the first time since his vacation began about three weeks ago. After court adjourned he gave a statement in which he said:

"I do not fear any investigation whatever. My conduct on the bench is open to the public, and while I trust that my official career has been of such a character as to answer all the unkind and untruthful statements which have been published in some papers, I am still ready to answer any suggestions of improper official conduct."

SEEKS A LOST HEIRLOOM.

Reward Offered in The Times for a Diamond and Topaz Bracelet.

Joseph H. Steinhardt, whose business address is 101 Park Place, has lost a valuable bracelet. He offers a liberal reward in the Lost and Found column of THE TIMES to-day for its recovery. The article is described as a diamond and topaz enameled bracelet, which is valued as an heirloom by its owner.

Another advertiser in the same column offers $25 reward for the recovery of an old-fashioned pin, a raised flower in front, hair in back, with the word "Alicia" engraved on it. This is also valued as a keepsake, and the reward will be paid on its return to the office of the Seymour Hotel, 50 West Forty-fifth Street. It was believed to have been dropped on the west side of Sixth Avenue yesterday, between Forty-fifth and Forty-ninth Streets.

Mrs. A. I. Namm of 22 West Seventy-second Street offers $100 reward for the recovery of a medium-sized gold bag studded with six diamonds and five sapphires which she left in No. 1 telephone booth at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel on the Thirty-third Street side about 4:45 P. M. yesterday.

Mrs. Namm said last night that there was nothing of value in the bag. There were no initials on the bag, but the frame was chased in an artistic and uncommon manner. The bag was a present to her.

SAVES DROWNING CANOEIST.

Sinking Boy Holds on to His Rescuer's Ankle—Boatman to Their Aid.

An unusual rescue of a drowning boy took place off the Seawanhaka boathouse, in Flushing Bay, North Beach, late Sunday evening, when Vincent O'Connor, 17 years old, of Elmhurst, was brought ashore unconscious. In company with a companion young O'Connor went canoeing, and when some distance off in the bay his craft capsized. His companion struck out for shore, leaving young O'Connor to struggle as best he could.

From the verenda of the clubhouse Jacob Salg of Corona saw the boy's plight, and, jumping into a motor boat, started to his rescue. When within a short distance of O'Connor, the motor suddenly stopped, but the momentum of the boat carried it to within fifteen feet of him. Salg jumped overboard, and the sinking boy caught Salg's right ankle.

At this juncture Fred Tezes of 150 Taylor Street, Brooklyn, bore down upon them in his motor boat, and, catching hold of Salg lifted him partly out of the water and gave him a firm grip on the side of the boat. Tezes then dived and brought up O'Connor. At the clubhouse O'Connor was revived after about an hour's work.

NOT ALARMED OVER CUBA.

Minister Velez Thinks Cabinet Changes Will Not Be Revolutionary.

Gen. Carlos Garcia y Velez, the Cuban Minister to the United States, stopped in New York yesterday, on his way to Manchester, N. H., where the Cuban Embassy has its Summer residence. Referring to the reports in the morning papers that President Gomez of Cuba would make a number of changes in his Cabinet, he said:

"President Gomez, it is likely, will make only such changes as are required to meet the exigencies of the moment. I had an official report from my home Government this morning which gave no evidence of any alarming conditions prevailing. I think it is all talk.

"Affairs in Cuba are flourishing. We have a record-breaking sugar crop this year. The amount of this year's revenues and customs will be $34,000,000, while our expenditures will not exceed $33,000,000."

HORSES BOLT INTO A STORE.

Crash Through a Window, Trampling a Child at Play.

Two horses attached to a large truck became frightened yesterday and dashed down the steep Park Hill Avenue at Yonkers. Near the bottom they swerved into Kellinger Street and, plunging upon the sidewalk, bolted into the grocery store of Nicola Ciarelli.

Angelica Felasco, aged 3 years, of 67 School Street, was sitting in front of the store making "mud pies." As the horses jumped upon the sidewalk the driver, Joseph Steinmetz, was about to leap for his life, but seeing the child's peril he made a last effort to rein in the animals. The next instant the horses crashed through the window and the plate glass was smashed to pieces.

The little girl was badly cut about the face and arms and was injured about the body, one of the horses trampling her. Steinmetz was hurled through the store and cut by flying glass. One of the horses had to be shot.

$10,000 Fire Near Rochester.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 23.—A portion of the plant of the Monarch Plaster Company, near Garbutt, N. Y., was destroyed by fire yesterday. The loss is estimated at $10,000. Antonio Nella, an Italian, was seriously burned about the face.

3,300 SHOUTERS DINE WITH THE M'MANUS

Yards of Fried Eels and Sixty Barrels of Beer Go at His Outing.

A LITTLE CHAMPAGNE, TOO

Field Sports and Baseball Games with Fine Prizes for All the Winners.

The Thomas J. McManus Association had its fourth annual outing and games yesterday at Witzel's Point View Grove, College Point, 3,300 voters of the Eleventh Assembly District being present. They jammed the street at Forty-ninth Street and Ninth Avenue so closely between 9 and 10 in the morning that traffic had to be diverted and the Ninth Avenue cars could hardly pass.

With Leader The McManus and Senator "Big Tim" Sullivan at their head, they marched around the block to Fiftieth Street. Here somewhat unexpectedly they met Sheriff Foley. He was coming down the steps of the elevated railroad on the way from his downtown district to the excursion steamer. While the band made the tenement walls resound with its blaring Senator Sullivan, head and shoulders above the rest of the crowd, waved his long arm at the Sheriff.

"Get into the procession, Sheriff! Get into the procession," he shouted.

The swinging rear ranks of the 3,300 by this time had bumped up against the front and were eddying out on the sidewalk in disorder. Everybody was wearing a gray silk knock-about cap. Everybody was pushing and perspiring and waving flexible dinkey canes with tri-colored pennants on the handles. Sheriff Foley, from the elevated steps, looked out over the gray-capped sea with a benevolent smile.

"That ain't a procession. It's a riot," he chuckled. Then he let himself be pulled into line and trudged stolidly along over the cobblestones between Sullivan and McManus. When the procession reached the Iron Steamboat Sirius, at the foot of West Forty-fifth Street, those who had already got aboard, recognizing Senator Sullivan's towering shoulders and high-crowned straw hat, sent up a lusty cheer. Then the 3,300 swarmed up the gangplank, while the vociferous Entertainment Committee yelled:

"Tear off your boat kewpons!" "Get your free cigars!"

Just as the Sirius was about to cast off, 500 young men who hadn't bought tickets stormed the gangplank. They were repulsed valiantly by a sortie of stout committeemen and perspiring police. Then, while the big brass band, three concertinas and five male quartets tried to see which could make the most noise, the 3,300 constituents crowded around the bar or started card games on the decks. Their leaders meantime locked themselves into the small dining saloon at the bow, drank champagne and played a card game of their own, until College Point was reached.

Even before the lines could be made fast the Sirius seemed to burst open and drop out its passengers. Shirt-sleeved men and boys took flying leaps from every deck and swarmed up to the grove's big dining hall. The first course consisted of clam fritters. Alderman Fred Richter, who is President of the district's Lobster Club, complained to Leader McManus that he couldn't find any clams in them. Then came huge platters of fried eel, rolls, and coffee. Beefsteak and friend potatoes followed.

Besides the edibles, 120 half barrels of beer, 10,000 cigars, 400 boxes of soda, 600 bottles of effervescent waters, and 6 cases of champagne were consumed.

Then the baseball and athletic games started. The contestants in these were not merely the young men of the district. The prizes included all sorts of articles of men's jewelry. The West Side Athletic Club, the New York Athletic Club, the Pastime Athletic Club, and the Irish-American Athletic Club all sent representatives.

While the field events were being run off the McManus baseball teams, junior and senior, were playing the Curry junior and senior baseball teams for the championship of the Eleventh and Thirteenth Assembly Districts. The competition in all these different events lasted until after darkness fell.

Those on the outing included Assemblyman Owen W. Bohan, whose name, with those of Louis Wendel, Jr., E. R. Thompson, and William G. Kier, is being mentioned for the Tammany candidacy for the City Judgeship in the coming election.

Leader McManus was much pleased at the way his constituents turned out to make merry at his celebration.

"There are only 10,000 voters in the district," he said, "and I have 3,300 right here. The Committee of One Hundred won't cut any ice in my district at the coming election. It will find the ice in the Eleventh too thick for cutting."

VIOLATED CHILD LABOR LAW.

Magistrate Voorhees Holds Ten Coney Islanders, but Thinks Cases Unjust.

Ten Coney Island business men, including Alderman Lewis M. Potter, who operates a string of candy and popcorn stands, were before Magistrate Voorhees in the Coney Island Court yesterday charged with violating the child labor law. Some were charged with allowing children between the ages of 14 and 16 to work later than 7 P. M., and some were charged with allowing their juvenile employes between 16 and 21 years of age to work later than 10 P. M. All were held for Special Sessions.

Magistrate Voorhees said that while, under the law, he must hold the men, he thought the agents of the Children's Society were especially hard on Coney Island. He declared that the law was passed to protect children working in stores and factories all the year around.

OKLAHOMA GIRLS AT CONEY.

One Sightseeing Young Woman Lassoes Horses—At Ellis Island.

The twenty-five young women who are here from Oklahoma on a sightseeing expedition put in a strenuous day yesterday. Under the chaperonage of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Strom, and piloted by Arthur W. Pye, General Passenger Agent of the Mallory Steamship Company, they visited the immigration station on Ellis Island in the morning. After a dinner there they inspected the Aquarium, and then went to Coney Island.

There they visited Dreamland and Miss Bessie Wilson amused the crowd watching the circus by lassoing horses. Their next stop was Luna Park. It was late last night before they got back to the Hotel Empire, where they are stopping.

TRAIN HOLD-UP NEAR HOBOKEN

Robbers Break Into Lackawanna Car, but Are Driven Off—Detective Shot.

A fast freight on the Lackawanna line running between Hoboken and Scranton was held up on Saturday night a quarter of a mile west of the Hackensack Bridge, in the Hackensack Swamp. Special Detective Gullanland and the train crew had a running pistol fight with six robbers, who had already taken two bales of silk out of one of the cars. Gullanland was shot in the thigh, and the injury will keep him in bed for some time.

The Lackawanna now has a special detective on all these fast freights. Its officers say that it is subjected to serious losses by train thieves. They say that a great deal of the robbery is committed on moving trains.

Shortly after the Scranton freight had started on Saturday night it came suddenly to a halt, the emergency brakes having been thrown on in some way unknown to the engineer. Gullanland jumped out of the caboose and ran alongside of the train. When about midway he saw a car door open. Stopping, he flashed an electric lantern into the car. He said later that the six men began shooting at him, some from the car and others from the tall swamp grass.

He fell with the wound in his thigh. The train crew came running up then, and the robbers disappeared through the grass. The two bales of silk were found on the ground near the car. Gullanland was taken on to Stroudsburg, his home.

Frank Hyland, 16 years old, was arrested yesterday in the Port Morris Lackawanna yards and later locked up in the jail at Dover, N. J., on suspicion of knowing something about the attempted robbery. He admitted that he was near the scene at the time.

TRIAL UNFAIR, SAYS HAFFEN.

Official Complains to Hughes That He Is the Victim of Prejudice.

Borough President Louis F. Haffen of the Bronx yesterday submitted to Gov. Hughes his final reply to the charges of misconduct in office, on the strength of which his removal has been asked for and recommended, after hearings before Wallace Macfarlane as referee, the Governor's Commissioner in the case.

In the reply, which is signed by Morgan J. O'Brien and Louis O. Van Doren, counsel for Mr. Haffen, prejudice against their client on the part of the Commissioner of Accounts, who made the petition for his removal, is pleaded.

"The petitioner has created an atmosphere of accusation," the lawyers say in their brief. "He is so profoundly immersed therein that no good deed or worthy act of the respondent can illuminate the gloom. Mr. Macfarlane's report itself is of the same sombre hue. It perhaps contains a statement of everything relating to the respondent's administration which might be criticised, but it refers to nothing that was proved to be good."

The Governor has intimated that he will give his decision in the case soon.

GET ONE OF 'KID TWIST' GANG.

Lewis Had Jumped $8,000 Bail—Says He Has Been in Old Haunts.

Abe Lewis, a member of the notorious "Kid Twist" gang, which terrorized East New York at one time, for whom the Brooklyn police have been searching since last June, when he jumped his bail of $8,000, was arrested yesterday in front of the Brooklyn Post Office in Washington Street by Lieuts. McCloskey and Duane of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau. He was taken so by surprise that he did not get a chance to put up a fight.

He was brought to the District Attorney's office and immediately afterward taken before Supreme Justice Crane. To make sure that the prisoner would not get a chance again to jump his bail, Justice Crane committed him to Raymond Street Jail without bail.

Two indictments are pending against Lewis—one for assault for shooting David Krissal of 2,028 Bergen Street in a saloon in Brownsville, and the other for robbing a grocery store in East New York. Lewis says he has been in his favorite haunts in East New York while the police have been looking for him.
